FIREMEN FROM LADDERS 1 AND 8 AND ENGINES 4, 6, 8 AND 25, AT WORK ON UPPER FLOORS OF BLAZING BUILDING

CUNARD AGENT HITS BACK AT B. & A. ROAD

SHOWS HOW TRANSPORTATION DELAY IS DUE TO RAILROAD INEFFICIENCY.

Agent Charles P. Sumner of the Cunard Steamship Company, who has squarely placed the fault for transportation delays with the Boston & Albany railroad, has stirred the whole water front of Boston. Emphatic approval of Mr. Sumner's stand is heard on every side. Vice-President Van Etten's charge that the trouble was due to the steamship agents is plumply denied by Mr. Sumner.

Seldom does the Cunard company come out with such a statement asthat given by Mr. Sumner. Not only does he assert that the failure is due to the railroad in a general way, but he cited one striking instance where a cargo contracted for nearly eight weeks ago at Buffalo has not been moved. Yet Mr. Van Etten himself said that he could see no reason why the shipment could not be reasonably depended upon on time.

Mr. Sumner's Statement.

This is the Cunard company's statement made by Mr. Sumner:

"On January 25 I made an engagement of 40,000 bushels of grain for shipment by the Cunard steamship sailing March 5. The grain was then at Buffalo, and the Boston & Albany Railroad was given orders at once to bring the 40,000 bushels forward to meet our sailing five weeks later (March5).

"I took the precaution to write Mr. Van Etten January 29, calling his attention to the very ample time to move the grain to Boston to meet a sailing of March 5.

"The reply to my letter reads: 'I see no reason why you cannot reasonably depend upon this grain being here at the time spoken of.'

"Our steamer of March 5 sailed without the grain and with the space reserved for it empty.

"Our steamer of March 12 sailed and yet not a single bushel of this grain had arrived. Again March 19 we had a steamer sail without this grain, and several thousand tons vacant space in her.

Grain Stil in Buffalo.

"So far as I can learn, the 40,000 bushels of grain is still in the railroad elevator at Buffalo.

"I am quite prepared to prove all the statements I have made in this interview.

One Example of B. & A.'s Prompt Freight Delivery

Jan. 25.—Arrangements made by Agent Sumner of the Cunard steamship line to ship 40,000 bushels of grain from Buffalo to Boston for March 5 sailing.

Jan. 29.—Agent Sumner writes Vice-President Van Etten of the Boston & Albany, calling attention to the shipment and asking that it be made within the five weeks allowed.

Mr. Van Etten replies: "I see no reason why you cannot reasonably depend upon this grain being here at the time spoken of."

March 5.—Steamer sails without the grain.

March 12.—Another steamer sails. No grain arrives from Buffalo.

March 19.—Third steamer sails. Space reserved for Buffalo shipment unfilled.

March 21.—The grain is still in the railroad elevator at Buffalo, so far as Agent Sumner can learn.

$1,000,000 FIRE IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—Fire destroyed more than $1,000,000 worth of property in the Atlantic refining works, Point Breeze, to-day.

When the engines arrived the exploding oil and the danger to surrounding property caused four alarms to be sounded.

A number of the employes of the concern were burned before the firemen got to work. The explosions hurled burning oil on the firemen, and many of them were so badly injured that they had to be taken to hospitals. The cause of the fire is a mystery.

FIREMEN IN PERIL

Several Hot-Air Explosions Menace Stubborn Work of the Department.

Fire caused a damage of about $130,000 in the building owned by the Davis estate at the corner of Hanover and Union streets at 7:17 o'clock this morning. Three alarms were sent in.

The stocks of the Monarch Clothing Company, the Primo Cigar Company, Bornstein Bros., picture frame manufacturers; S. Samuel, haberdasher; S. Dreayer, jeweler, and H. Ulin & Co., hatters and clothiers, were practically ruined.

The fifth floor was occupied by the Six Little Tailors as a workshop. They estimate their loss at $5,000.

Considerable water got into the store of Henry N. Clark, stove dealers, in an adjoining building, and caused a loss of about $5,000.

The losses are:

The Monarch Clothing Company, $20,000; the Primo Cigar Company, $5,000; S. Dreayer, $8,000; S. Samuel, $8,000; H. Ulin & Co., $9,000; Bornstein Bros., probably $50,000.

The damage to the building was about $10,000.

The fire started on the third floor, which, with the fourth floor, was occupied by Bornstein Bros.

CAR TRAFFIC SUSPENDED.

The second floor was burned out, and practically everything on it destroyed by flames. The damage done on the other floors was principally by smoke and water.

This is the third fire that has occurred in the building within a few months, and the State police will make a rigid investigation.

Two previous fires in the Davis Building were on the fourth floor. Both these fires were in the afternoon, and very little damage was done.

"When the next fire occurs," one of the tenants said after the second, "the entire building will probably be consumed."

During the progress of the fire the street car traffic on Hanover street had to be suspended, and hundreds of persons on their way to work left the cars and walked.

That the work of the firemen would not be impeded the power had to be shut off the trolley wires and some of the wires had to be cut.

SENDS IN THIRD ALARM.

The fire was discovered by Captain Kimball of Police Station 1 on Hanover street, who sent in an alarm at 7:17 o'clock.

Captain Kimball says that he was on the way to Station 1 when he was startled by an explosion. Unable to locate the direction whence it came, he continued on towards the station, but within two minutes he saw flames shoot from the Davis building and rushed to the box and sent in an alarm.

Before the firemen arrived the flames were bursting through the windows on the second floor and shooting towards the top.

Realizing that the flames would soon gain a headway which the apparatus which responds to one alarm could not control, Chief Mullen soon after his arrival sent in a second alarm and a few minutes later a third.

There were several hot air explosions after the firemen got to work, and the windows of the three upper stories were blown out. Some of the firemen narrowly escaped injury from falling glass.

Crowds outside the burning building soon became so dense that extra police had to be summoned from station 1.

For a time it looked as if the flames would spread to adjoining buildings, but several lines of hose which had been carried up fire escapes on the Union street side became quickly effective, and Chief Mullen became satisfied that he would be able to confine the fire to one building.

Morris G. Tuch, proprietor of the Monarch Clothing Company, says he cannot understand the cause of the blaze.

CHIEF MULLEN MYSTIFIED.

Chief Mullen says that there are many suspicious circumstances in connection with the fire, and he is going to furnish the State police with some information which may aid them in their investigation.

The Davis building was erected three years ago.

3 MEN FALL FORTY FEET IN ELEVATOR SHAFT

ONE HURT SO BADLY HE WILL PROBABLY DIE; THE OTHERS ALSO INJURED.

Three men were badly hurt, one probably fatally, to-day, through the breaking of ropes suspending a platform on which they were at work in the new building at No. 400 Newbury street, Back Bay.

The man probably fatally injured was Fred Germain, of Worcester, aged twenty-one years, fractured ribs and internal injuries. He is at the City Hospital.

The others injured and who will recover, are: Gottfried Hanson of Worcester, aged twenty-five, left thigh broken; Raymond Green of Worcester, aged twenty, left ankle broken.

Hanson, Green and Germain are all employes of the Worcester Plunger Elevator Company which is installing an elevator plant in the new building. While the men were all at the top of the shaft forty feet from the ground the suspending ropes broke and the men fell to the bottom, landing in a heap.

Ambulances were at once telephoned for, and they came from Police Stations 16 and 4 and from the City Hospital. The three injured men were taken to the City Hospital.

Germain has not recovered consciousness from the time he fell. The surgeons do not think that he can recover.

FEAR FRIDAY FISH FAMINE

Boston is threatened with a fish famine of no small proportions. Only two shiploads of cod and haddock arrived from the Banks to-day, and prices soared from $3 a hundredweight to $5, $6 and even $7.50. Anxious retailers snapped up the only shipments offered on board the two vessels, leaving the market absolutely bare.

With the Lenten demand for sea food always large, and no shipments in sight for even the usual Friday trade, Boston fish merchants are considerably hampered.

The big gale of yesterday is supposed to have kept many fishing vessels from running into port, or even getting large enough catches to make the day's run to Boston markets.

SMELTERS LEAD IN STOCK DROP

NEW YORK, March 21.—Stocks opened strong and active to-day with prices in general slightly better than the closing ones of last night. Almost immediately after the opening, however, heavy selling began, which carried the list down under the leadership of Smelters. The declines in the first five minutes ranged from ½ to 1¼ points.

Reading, Anaconda, B. R. T., St. Paul, Union Pacific and Pressed Steel opened up ¼, and St. Paul gained in all ½. Steel preferred gained ⅜. Erie and Southern Pacific were off 1; Pennsylvania, ⅜; Smelting and Canadian Pacific, ⅛, and Amalgamated, B. & O. and Louisville & Nashville ⅛ lower. Amalgamated lost 1⅛ net and Reading declined 1¼ from the best.

THAW RAGES IN CELL

Countess of Yarmouth and Evelyn Thaw Hastily Summoned to Tombs to Calm Slayer of Stanford White—Enraged by Madhouse Threat.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 21.—In fear and high rage at the prospect of being sent to a madhouse, Harry K. Thaw spent a tumultuous morning in the Tombs to-day, and was only partially pacified by the influence of his sister, the Countess of Yarmouth.

No one could calm Thaw. Finally the Countess, who sways more influence over him than anyone else, not excepting his mother, was sent for peremptorily.

Accompanied by Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, she hastened to the Tombs and immediately was admitted into her brother's presence.

A night of sleeplessness and fretting had made Thaw as unstrung and petulant as a nervous child, but a half-hour's conversation with the Countess calmed him somewhat. Before she left Thaw was in a more placid mood and ready to go into court to hear Justice Fitzgerald's ruling on the appointment of a lunacy commission.

CRAIG WADSWORTH ARRIVED.

Jerome's "missing witness," Craig Wadsworth, second secretary of the embassy in London, arrved here to-day aboard the Oceanic. The District Attorney had counted upon his getting here before this to testify as to certain episodes in London, in which he, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thaw and young Mrs. Thaw's mother were concerned.

It is said that Mrs. William Thaw, the defendant's mother, is pleased at the turn affairs have taken, for she knows that her son cannot now suffer death in the electric chair. The mother's view of the case is also said to be shared by the Countess of Yarmouth. The sister agrees with her mother that any fate for her brother is beter than execution as a criminal.

MOTHER TO BE NEAR HIM.

Tioronda, the beautiful and spacious Howland estate, located in a suburb of Matteawan, it is believed will soon pass into the hands of Mrs. William Thaw.

It is mile from the Matteawan Asylum for the criminal insane, where Harry K. Thaw will be incarcerated in the event of a commission in lunacy being appointed and adjudging him incurably insane.

The devotion of the aged mother is carried to this extreme so that she can be near her son. There is a well-defined rumor that she has taken over the handsome estate for five years, with an option to purchase. The Howland estate is owned by Mrs. Howland, the widow of the General. It is beautifully situated, overlooking the Hudson, the grounds are handsomely laid out and the house, a large, old-fashioned structure, has of late been remodeled.

GLEASON STILL IN CHARGE?

It was reported to-day that Harry Thaw is preparing a history of his case and the trial, as it has appeared to him, to be submitted to Justice Fitzgerald as showing he has fully understood all the proceedings and is able to advise his counsel, but that his attorneys have decided not to allow the statement to get out of their own hands.

Dan O'Reilly, when questioned about the reported statement, said: "Well, I can't deny Thaw is preparing a statement, but I can say it will never be presented to the court or given to the newspapers."

Further evidnces of disagreement among the Thaw lawyers cropped out to-day. McPike announced that his partner, Delmas, will not be in court to-day for the insanity proceedings. Hartridge, Peabody and O'Reilly were all at the Tombs and the court house, but they showed little interest in the coming insanity hearing. One of the lawyers remarked significantly that Gleason is in charge of the case in its present phase.

Shows His Authority.

Gleason offered a display of his authority in the case when a reporter asked him to be allowed to make a photograph of Thaw's will. The reporter had secured a note from Lawyer Delmas asking that he be shown the will. Gleason curtly refused, saying: "I have Mr. Thaw's private papers in my possession, and neither Delmas, McPike, you or any one else can see them without my permission, and I refuse."

Gleason Gave Jerome His Chance at Last

"I WANT VINDICATION; I AM NOT INSANE."—HARRY THAW

"I WANT vindication.

"A lunacy commission will not frighten me. It will decide that I am sane. But what I want is assurance that the men who have heard the evidence believe that I was justified.

—Statement by Harry K. Thaw to-day.

UNDID DELMAS' CAREFUL WORK

By Asking Alienist if Thaw Was Sane Now Made Opening for Commission.

THAW PALED AT ANSWER

BY Dorothy Dix

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner.

WITH tears in his eyes and his voice breaking with emotion, District Attorney Jerome halted the trial of Harry Thaw by an impassioned plea to the conscience of the court to stop what he characterized as the inhumanity of trying an insane man for his life.

The climax of the case, and the triumph of the District Attorney—for he has worked to this end ever since the beginning of the trial—came as suddenly as a flash of lightning out of a clear sky.

Instantly, as soon as Dr. Hamilton took his seat in the witness chair, an electric thrill ran through the room and a hundred rumors found voice. What did it mean?

First Question Brought Jerome to His Feet.

The truth was that the defence had taken the initiative in a desperate situation. It had somehow heard that at the end of Mr. Delmas's summing up the District Attorney proposed to ask for a lunacy commission on the evidence that the defence had itself produced of Thaw's mental condition on the night he slew White, and its calling of Dr. Hamilton was an effort to block this move by adding his testimony to that of the other alienists that the prisoner was really demented at the time he committed the crime. It was hoped that this testimony might be gotten in without permitting Dr. Hamilton to testify as to Thaw's mental condition at the present time.

Fallacious hope. The first question to the physician brought Mr. Jerome to his feet with a demand that if Dr. Hamilton told anything of his visits to Thaw and what he learned there of the prisoner's mental state and his family's clinical history, that he must tell all. Point by point Mr. Delmas fought out every technicality with him, and then suddenly, before anyone realized where things were drifting, the long expected had happened.

Mr. Jerome was passionately asserting his belief that Thaw was crazy, that he was not able to consult with his counsel, and that if he was convicted under the circumstances, it would be nothing short of butchery to take his life—a butchery like that of McNaughton, who was convicted and executed in England while suffering from paranoia, and that is one of the shames of civilization.

Efforts of Associates to Stop Gleason Vain.

Before Mr. Jerome was through speaking Mr. Gleason was on his feet, his face, which is ordinarily as livid as a corpse, flushed crimson with anger as he resented the District Attorney's charge of unprofessional conduct. In his hand was some bright steel instrument—a knife or metal-covered pencil—that flashed like a dagger as he waved his arm up and down in excited gesture. Mr. Delmas, from within the bar, tried, diplomatically to choke him off by replying to Jerome himself; Dan O'Reilly sought in vain to stop him by murmured advice to sit down and keep cool; even dignified Mr. Peabody made a surreptitious grab at his coat tails, but all in vain. Mr. Gleason's ire was roused. He was bound to say his say and he did it.

Turning theatrically and impressively to the witness stand he demanded the right to refute the District Attorney's calumnies out of the mouth of the witness. After much parley it was granted.

"Dr. Hamilton," he said, "before I have any chance to use any of my cajoleries and arts of persuasion upon you, I want to ask you if, in your opinion, the defendant is rational and able to consult with counsel within the meaning of the law?"

Not Capable of Advising with Counsel, Said Alienist.

"He is not capable of advising with counsel and conducting his own case," was the stunning reply of the famous alienist. Nor was that all that Mr. Gleason gained by suddenly taking the management of the case out of the hands of Mr. Delmas.

"I retire temporarily from the case," announced the dignified Californian.

Thaw listened to the arguments in regard to the appointing of the lunacy commission, and to Jerome's eloquent appeal for the stay of the trial until his mental condition could be assured, with a face that grew whiter and whiter until at last it was ghastly. Once he seemed on the point of springing to his feet, but he could not hold his hands still as he held his body by main effort of will. They shook as if with the palsy on the package of yellow blank books before him, the muscles of his face twitched and his eyebrows, always so noticeable, became more pronounced than ever and gave to his face a curious, discordant expression—as if part of it was laughing while the other part was serious with the solemnity of death itself.

To Owners of Bad Breath—

Foul Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Eating or Drinking Stopped at Once With Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Trial Package To Prove It Sent Free.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe they whiff out odor which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion, and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make your stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath, that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charyou have such a bad, bilious breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood—every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample to-day. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 93 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

MALDEN MAYOR GIVES WELCOME TO HEBREWS

LEADING CITIZENS OF CITY DENOUNCE THE ATTEMPT TO STIR UP CLASS PREJUDICE.

Leading Malden citizens, in statements to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day, welcome Jewish citizens to Malden, and vigorously condemn John W. Young and William H. Wing, who have been leading a small minority in the fight against the extension of the elevated railroad to Malden via Everett on the ground that it will take a class of "undesirable Jews" to Malden.

Conservative Malden expresses regret that the impression should have gone abroad that there is the slightest feeling against Hebrews or any other class of people.

Dr. Charles D. McCarthy, Mayor of Malden, feels that the attack made on Jews by Messrs. Wing and Young and some of their following is unjustified.

"I believe that the Jews should be allowed to come to Malden as well as any other nationality," declared Mayor McCarthy to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day. "They make good citizens and are entitled to all the privileges that are accorded any other people."

Sustain Mayor's Position.

Malden Deliberative Assembly, before which Messrs. Wing and Young made their anti-Jewish declarations, agrees with Mayor McCarthy.

Interviews obtained by the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day show the feling that really does exist among conservative Malden people.

Mayor McCarthy further said:

"I certainly do regret that this anti-Jewish agitation should have arisen. I do not believe that the attack upon them by the two gentlemen who made it was justified. All nationalities are welcome in Malden. Our only requirement is that they be good citizens. Hebrews come to us as American citizens and as such are entitled to all the privileges that are accorded any other class. Personally, I believe that Jews make as good citizens as any other class of people."

Ex-Mayor Charles G. Warren of the Warren Carpet Cleaning Company's plant:

"I am sorry to learn that the statements made by Messrs. Young and Wing have resulted in an anti-Jewish agitation. I do not believe now that there is any feeling against them by the solid, broad-minded and conservative citizens of Malden. The Jews are a moral race, honest, and in my opinion would be beneficial to Malden. They come here and invest their money. What right have we to keep them out?

Are Moral and Honest.

A. E. Bliss, General Superintendent of the Malden and Melrose Gas and Electric Company, said:

"I regret exceedingly, as do many other Malden citizens, that the remarks accorded Messrs. Wing and Young, were ever made. I believe that the Jews make good citizens, are moral and honest and quick to live up to the standard of their environment."

George E. Blakeslee, of Hopkins & Blakeslee, department store: "Our Jewish citizens are good fellows and good citizens. There is no class of people quicker to emulate the good points in others than the Jews. I know this from my personal experience."

"Make Good Citizens."

Peter Graffam, real estate, No. 1,105 Tremont building, Boston:

"We all know that the Hebrews make good citizens. From my personal experience with them through the large number of houses that I own in the Suffolk square district, I find them a moral race, who pay their bills."

ARSON CASE IN HANDS OF JURY

The case of Alden H. Sherburne of Lowell, charged with arson, and also, in two counts with burning to defraud insurance companies, was given to the jury to-day by Judge Fox in the Middlesex County Superior Criminal Court. The prosecuting companies are the Phoenix Fire Insurance Company of Hartford, Ct., and the Boston Fire Insurance Company.

The case arises from the burning of an automobile garage in Lowell, on November 16, 1905. Sherburne declares that he is the victim of spite on the part of Miss Norma Hill.

ASK FAIR TRIAL FOR MINERS

CALDWELL, Idaho, March 21.—The defence for Moyer and Haywood, miners accused of conspiracy in the killing of Governor Steunenburg, completed late last night a strong showing for a change of venue. Three days were devoted to reading from newspapers expressions against the accused, interviews with Governor Gooding, and statements by private detectives, which the defence claims have incited deep prejudice in the home county of Steunenburg. Following this showing six hundred affidavits, sworn to by citizens of this county, were read to demonstrate that a fair and impartial jury cannot be obtained here.

Four men who procured these six hundred affidavits declare that they talked in the aggregate with four hundred residents of Canyon County, who believe the defendants cannot get an impartial trial here.

This showing was controverted by Prosecutor Hawley, who presented twenty-five affidavits.

Attorney Nugent for the defence declared that it would be judicial murder to compel the defendants to go to trial in Canyon County, the home of Stuenberg.

MINISTER GOES WEST.

WORCESTER, March 21.—Rev. Samuel S. Dick of Trinity M. E. Church has accepted a call to the Wesley M. E. Church of Minneapolis.

$60 SHOE BILL BLOCKS WILL

An injunction was issued by Judge Fessenden of the Equity Session on Merits of the Superior Court to-day against Mrs. Emily W. Willard of No. 4 Strathmore road, Brookline, restraining her from probate proceedings in the matter of her husband's will.

The injunction was obtained on application of attorneys for the Henry H. Tuttle Company, shoe dealers, who have brought suit against the Brookline woman to recover for riding boots, bluchers, dancing pumps and other footwear to the value of over $60, alleged to have been sold to her.

SURROUND HOUSE OF SUSPECTED KIDNAPPER

RECOVERY OF STOLEN MARVIN BOY IN CHESTER, PA., HOURLY EXPECTED.

DOVER, Del., March 21.—While a detail of detectives surround the house of a suspect in Chester, Pa., where the stolen Marvin boy is believed to be held in custody, police officials and Pinkerton men are hastening to that city to make identification positive before descent is made upon the house.

It is now believed to be a matter of hours only when the lad will be restored to his family and his captors will be in custody.

Roosevelt Sends Aid.

The authorities of Chester telephoned to the police here for instructions regarding the arrest of a man in Upland, a suburb of Chester, who, they declare, has the missing boy.

Meanwhile, however, the Dover police had been following the same clue and were amazed to learn that the Chester authorities were working on the same lines.

That President Roosevelt has taken part in the search for the boy and that he will use the great machinery of the Federal government in hunting down the kidnappers was made plain late last night by the arrival of two Secret Service agents.

Look for Sensation Soon.

"All I can say at this hour," declared Superintendent Dimmo, "is that this Chester clue fits in exactly with the negotiations that were being carried on by Dr. Marvin today, and we look for sensational developments at any moment. I will not tell at this time where Dr. Marvin passed the day. To do so before I learn of certain expected occurrences might ruin the best plans that have been made in regard to the recovery of the kidnapped boy."

The appearance of secret service men in Dover has aroused widespread interest.

It is supposed that they have been sent here by orders of the President to confer with Dr. Marvin and to offer him their services and the use of a revenue cutter if such should be desired. Members of the State Legislature who are still in the city believe that the President has taken steps to extend Federal aid to the searchers for the kidnapped boy.

At Senator Du Pont's dinner to the Republican members of the Legislature it was suggested that the Delaware Senator ask the President to assign a revenue cutter to search all sloops in Delaware Bay for the lost child.

It was not until last evening that it became definitely known that Dr. Marvin had left town. He talked with dozens of men early in the day, and said he was going to drive out to his farm. Those who called at the farm later in the day failed to find him, and then came a report from Wyoming that he had taken the train there.

PAWTUCKET STRIKERS ASK GOLDEN'S AID

PAWTUCKET, R. I., March 21.—The striking weavers of the Royal Weaving Company of Pawtucket and Central Falls have called on John Golden of Fall River to come and form an organization.

He is expected here to-day to address a meeting of the men.

Up to last night there had been no arrests made for the assault of the night before on Paul Peterson. This occurred in front of the news store of John Burns, at High and Central streets, one of the busiest corners in the city, and Peterson was handled rather roughly. It is declared that he recognized his assailants, but for some reason no warrants were taken out up to last night.

Joseph Ott, agent of the mill, declares that he has no desire to treat further with the strikers, and they in turn say they want nothing more to do with Mr. Ott. A slight advance in wages has been made, and the strikers have refused to accept it. The Pawtucket mill on Central avenue is shut down, and it is said that unless a way can be found to start up the looms in the Central Falls plant, that mill will also have to stop.

Another Pawtucket strike was started yesterday when about 100 employes of the United States Flushing Company left their places, and by their action several of the departments of the concern are crippled.

The strikers include the backtenders in the machine room, the boys in the white room and the boys in the gray room. The reason for the strike is that all of these employes want an increase of $1 a week in their pay. Some of them are receiving $6 per week, others $7 a week and a few as high as $8. The increase that they demand, however, is expected to affect all, regardless of the pay they now receive.

SUED FOR FALSE ARREST; WIN

PROVIDENCE, March 21.—A verdict for the defence was rendered by the jury in the suit of Lynton R. Newhall, son of Deputy United States Marshal Charles C. Newhall, against Patrolmen Charles R. Egan and James A. Lee and Lieutenant of Police John J. Toole in the Superior Court yesterday afternoon in a suit for $2,000 for alleged false arrest. It took the jury about an hour and a half to find for the defendants.

At the opening of the day's proceedings the defence put on the stand several witnesses whose testimony tended to show that Patrolman Egan used no greater force on Newhall than was necessary on the night of the fire near the corner of Weybosset and Dorrance streets in his attempt to clear the street in order to permit the fire apparatus to move about freely.

CITY MAY BUY FOTTLER ESTATE FOR ASYLUM

Dormant for ten years the proposition originated under Mayor Quincy's administration to buy the old Jacob Fotter estate on Canterbury street, Forest Hills, for an addition to the Boston Insane Hospital, has been revived and rapid progress is being made towards completing the sale.

Ten years ago the fact that politicians were involved in the deal killed it. Herbert Harding, president of the Citizens' Association obtaining an injunction.

This year several eminent politicians are doing all they can to assist in putting the deal through. John C. Cobb, Mayor Quincy's real estate expert, in behalf of the city, and Wellington Holbrook, in behalf of John Fottler, Jr., the present owner of the property, are now engaged in making an appraisal of the property.

The property consists of about thirty acres, or to be exact 1,286,322 feet, and is assessed for but $19,800. It is bounded by Canterbury, Morton, Harvard and Walk Hill streets and adjoins the property on which the present male and female asylums are situated. The city now leases He said that the purchase of the land had been recommended for several years, but not until now was there a prospect of it going through.

The purchase will have to be made by the Mayor and City Council the trustees the property at a price of $1,200 a year and has some buildings on it which are used for the overflow from the men's asylum.

Chairman George H. Sargent of the Insane Hospital trustees stated to-day that while he knew that politics were involved in the deal when it was proposed ten years ago he was convinced that the city would get a fair deal this time considering the fact that they had one appraiser while the Fottler heirs had another.

having no authority in the premises except to recommend. All the trustees except Michael J. Jordan, it is said, favor the purchase, but Jordan strongly objects. Whether on the ground that politics are involved or because he believes it unnecessary, Mr. Jordan would not state to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day.

The other trustees are Mary T. Morrison, Michael S. Morton, C. James Connolly, George A. Sanderson and Mrs. C. L. Marion.

NEW CENTURY CORSETS PROVE TO BE GREAT TRANSFORMERS

Latest Wrinkles in "Shape-Makers" Shown by Miss Elizabeth White.

Models Large and Small Flock to Demonstration Hall.

What Wizard Elizabeth White did to the female form divine last night at her corset demonstration in the New Century building was a wonder.

The spectators gasped, exclaimed, rubbed their eyes, and gasped some more.

The transformed subjects caught a glimpse of themselves in the mirror and asked for introductions.

Miss White alone was smiling and calm.

"Perfectly easy," she remarked. "The easiest thing in the world. I've made over the figures of hundreds and taught hundreds of others how to make their own figures.

"It's all a question of corset adjustment. If you are too fat, place your fat where you want it.

"If you are too thin, make yourself look plump."

Too fat models predominated. Miss White led them forth, rotund and shapeless. In plain words she described the faults of their figures.

Made a Transformation.

"Too much stomach, too much bust, too much hips."

Then—presto!

Taking a pair of long, finely boned, well-gartered corsets, her own model, "the combination," she explains, "of common sense, much study and more experience," she started to adjust about 250 pounds of obesity.

It looked hopeless, but Miss White chattered cheerfully and worked energetically.

"Get your corsets big enough," she advised. "A small corset is the worst enemy of a good figure. Then put it on low enough and hook it.

"Then stretch yourself into a comfortable position.

"Be perfectly easy.

"Now fasten your garters, two in front, one on each hip.

"Stretch again. Then adjust your fat, placing it where you wish it to go." Miss White was placing the fat of the subject in the desired position.

The subject looked surprised, but heroic. Once or twice she winced a little, but her face was smiling.

It seemed to be a case where the desirability of the end justifies the painfulness of the means.

The fat adjusted, Miss White grasped the lacings.

She took hold of them with a determined hand, and drew them with full strength.

The model gasped and almost lost her balance, but Miss White's grip on the strings was relentless.

Like a Fashion Plate.

"Loose at the top, but snug in the waist," she explained. "As snug as you please."

The model gasped again. Miss White tied the strings.

"There!" she explained; "there you are."

The model stood forth like a fashion plate.

The on-lookers applauded.

"Isn't she swell?" asked Miss White. "You can all look the same."

Miss White is not working any radical modish reforms in the figure of the day.

She lets women have hips and waist and bust much as nature intended, only properly adjusted.

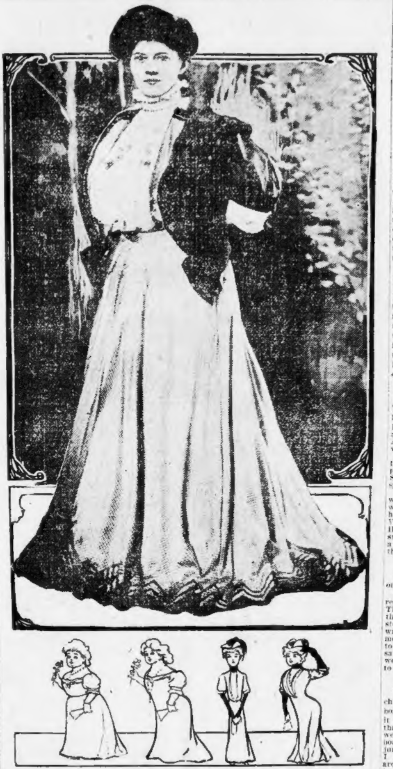
"The wasp waist is all talk," she declares, "and hips only look smaller.

"Don't be fooled. If you've got hips, you've got to keep them and nobody could breathe with a wasp waist."

The newest corset wrinkle shown was a soft silk band across the bust, boned to keep its place, and tied in the middle in a big soft bow.

GOV. POST COMING HOME.

SAN JUAN, P. R., March 21.—Governor Regis H. Post of Porto Rico is on his way to Washington to consult President Roosevelt on Island affairs and to approve of the selection of a native secretary for Porto Rico.



GOWN AT DRESSMAKERS' CONVENTION.

THIS gown displays the latest combination of taffeta coat and gown of veiling or light silk. It is of White and brown checked foulard, finished at the skirt edge by a band of brown taffeta.

The waist is of filet lace with valenciennes insertions and Irish crochet motifs, and has narrow strappings of the silk and touches of embroidered linen.

The coat is of brown taffeta, made with plaits back and front, to the belt, below which is a fitted peplum.

There are revers of the checked silk and cut steel buttons for fastenings. The sleeves are the kimona shape and end in linen cuffs.

M'VEY BLAMES PILOT FOR LOSS OF LARCHMONT

Captain of Wrecked Joy Line Steamer Tells Story of Disaster to Inspectors.

MEN POORLY PAID, HE SAYS

Special to the Boston American.

NEW LONDON, Ct., March 21.—Blaming Pilot John Anson for the collision of the Joy liner Larchmont with the schooner Harry Knowlton, Captain George W. McVey's testimony before the steamboat inspectors, in which he declared he stuck to his boat to the last, is today exciting comment upon all sides, for the commander of the wrecked steamship gave his explanation of the catastrophe which resulted in terrible loss of life.

The examination of Captain McVey formed the last chapter of the official investigation into the wreck on the night of February 11 which the steamboat inspectors have been conducting. It was also the first statement made in an official way by the commander of the ill-fated craft. Captain McVey was before the inspectors for fully five hours, and yet through all of that trying ordeal his courage remained with him, and he was able to substantiate his official report.

"Anson, What Have You Done?"

Describing the collision Captain McVey said: "Then suddenly realizing what had occurred, I turned to the man whom I afterward considered responsible for the accident and exclaimed: 'My God, John Anson, what have you done?' The pilot, with glasses in hand, made no reply."

In these words Captain McVey declared that the pilot, one of the many scores who perished in the wreck on Long Island Sound on that cold night, was really responsible for the collision with the schooner.

Captain George McVey showed that low wages prevailed on the line for which he was master, and that the standard set for help was also at a low level. Captain McVey said masters on other lines got $2,500. He got $1,500. He explained that he had suggested to the company that it employ a better grade of men and was told that those on the Larchomnt were good enough.

Tells Story of Disaster.

Captain McVey detailed his own actions on the night the Larchmont went down.

"I ordered the men to their stations, realizing that the steamer was sinking fast. There was no other steamer in sight. I then went to the starboard side. The steamer had a heavy starboard list and was enveloped in steam amidships. The men were getting the boats ready. I said to the first mate it would be impossible to save anyone on that side. I also remarked we must endeavor to get our boat around to the leeward and save what we could.

Boat in Trough of Seas.

"While we were working on the boat the chief engineer came and said he had his boat ready. I assisted him in swinging it out, and told him to save all he could, that I must get my boat out. The men were swinging the boat out. The starboard guard was then under water and I jumped to my boat and called the sailors. I took the steering oar, intending to go around to leeward. The boat got into the trough of the sea, broadside to the wind, and try as I could it was impossible to bring around her head to the steamer.

Boat Drifts to Block Island.

"We were drifting away from the steamer all the time, and trying to get up to her. Almost before we could realize it the steamer went down. We stayed around as close as we could. We saw a number of boats go out of sight in the darkness. I decided the only thing to do was to let the boat drift, and we drifted to Block Island."

LAWS ENOUGH---HARRIMAN

Railroad Magnate Answers Rockefeller

HARRIMAN ANSWERS ROCKEFELLER

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.

RAILROADS are vastly overcapitalized. That is not a healthy situation. I think that properties should be capitalized at only their legitimate value, and if that were done there would be a feeling of security.

Federal control would be a better thing for the roads. They would then understand the laws they must observe and would be able to plan ahead intelligently without one State suddenly demanding one thing and another State being equally insistent on something entirely different.

There is an undercurrent that doesn't look good. I haven't quite made up my mind if the increased production of gold is responsible or not. Personally, I do not like the outlook.

I do not think our people are saving the money they should save. The nation at the present time is unusually prosperous, but financial reports do not show that saving has increased in ratio with our prosperity.

Something after English methods, which would give broader opportunities for the builders and creators and planners would be more to our American liking.

EDWARD H. HARRIMAN.

THE roads are not overcapitalized for the country and its capabilities. In counting your capitalization think of the money that has gone into the abandoned lines, bridges and terminals. They must be considered a part of the constructive cost, and when you take that in you will find that you have not overcapitalized.

There is Federal control now. There are laws enough on the statute books now—more than enough. All that is necessary is to have them judiciously and wisely administered. We don't need any more Federal control.

We have been brought up staggering, but we are going to go ahead. It may take time, but I am a great believer in this country, in its resources and its people, and this check will not be permanent.

It is probable that the cost of the necessities of life will fall. Possibly the damand will fall off, and that will bring about a reduction in prices—not a panic or violent reaction, but a general drawing in.

English methods are impossible. There is not a single item upon which the twain can meet. You can no more measure the enromous capacities and energies of the American peopl and their country han you can compare the equipment of American roads with the capacities of the English.

Check to Financial Activity is Only Temporary, He Declares.

By Charles P. Norcross.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The remarkable interview with John D. Rockefeller obtained by the BOSTON AMERICAN and printed exclusively yesterday, is answered to-day by E. H. Harriman, the foremost railway magnate of the country. On two important issues—Federal control and the overcapitalization of railroads—Mr. Harriman takes the negative side, disagreeing with Mr. Rockefeller. On many other questions he agrees with him.

These two interviews, with their controversial aspects, are the most notable contributions to the general discussion on existing national conditions.

E. H. Harriman declares that the railroads of the country are not overcapitalized; that there are sufficient laws upon the statute books at present to control the railways without additional legislation; that railroad building of development and not competition must be the rule of the future; that there probably will be an appreciable contraction in improvements in railroad properties and even a decrease in the cost of necessities of life; that any idea of standardizing American railways with English models is impossible, and that the present stature and wonderful growth of this country are due to the enthusiasm, the imagination and the speculative bent of a superbly capable people.

Those are some of the crisp, curt and earnest comments Mr. Harriman makes in discussing the railway situation in the United States, the proposed laws for further supervision of the roads and the recent panic in Wall Street and financial circles.

"Federal Control Now."

"What do you think of Mr. Rockefeller's statement that there should be Federal control of the railroads?" was the first question asked Mr. Harriman, who was interviewed at the Metropolitan Club.

"There is Federal control now," came the curt rejoinder. "That arm of the government to which is delegated the power for supervision of the railroads is equipped with enormous responsibilities. There are laws enough on the statute books now—more than enough. All that is necessary is to have them judiciously and wisely administered. There is no need for supplemental legislation."

"Do you think roads are overcapitalized?"

"No," said Mr. Harriman, and the negative fairly bounded from his lips.

"You must remember this is a wonderful country. It has been made by the enthusiasms, the imagination and the speculative bent of a superbly capable people. They have been a people that are magnificent pioneers. They saw into the future and adapted their works to the possibilities.

"There is much left to be developed in this country. Towns are growing like magic and its people are toiling like the Aladdin lamp genii. The roads are not overcapitalized for the country and its capabilities. Take any road, say the Pennsylvania—you have been over it. Did you ever notice the miles and miles of abandoned tracks? You have seen them criss-crossing everywhere you go. Instead of that you will now see the straight lines, the wonderful ballastings. In counting your capitalization think of the money that has gone into the abandoned lines, bridges and terminals. They must be considered a part of the constructive cost, and when you take that in you will find that you have not overcapitalized.

Refers to Dividend.

"Now take the dividend matter. There are not a great many roads in the country paying 6 per cent. dividends. Look at the matter in this light: A man who takes a preferred security must be contented with a smaller interest return. Suppose your bonds return 3 or 3½ per cent.—your preferred stock 4 or 5. Now take your average dividend and you will find that you have not overcapitalized. In your computation of capitalization and dividends you must take in the scrap heap or the abandoned equipment—and the average interest disbursement."

Sees Cause of Wall-Street Panic in Russo-Japanese War.

CITY FORCED TO ACT QUICKLY ON GARBAGE

The legal proceedings instituted by the Boston Merchants' Association against the garbage nuisance at Fort Hill wharf may cause Mayor Fitzgerald to immediately take the matter out of the hands of the special City Council committee which has been considering it for some time. The committee has met many times, but has made no report in regard to the abatement of the nuisance.

The case will come up April 3 on an order of notice for the city and the New England Sanitary Product Company to show cause why an injunction shall not issue, and in May will be heard on its merits. This leaves the city but a short time to act.

To Ask Babson's Advice.

Mayor Fitzgerald when asked today by a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter whether the legal action taken would cause any change in his plans said:

"I shall consult Corporation Counsel Babson to-day as to what legal effect on us the action has and shall issue a statement later. I dislike to show any discourtesy toward the committee by taking the matter out of its hands, but immediate action seems imperative."

The Mayor's plan, submitted to the City Council for consideration, was for a contract with the Sanitary Waste Disposal Company to erect a covered plant at the Fort Hill wharf where the kitchen garbage is now handled in scows and shipped to the plant of the New England Sanitary Product Company at Spectacle Island, and where the nuisance exists.

Was to Get $30,000 a Year.

Here the company for a consideration of $30,000 a year was to handle the garbage in a sanitary manner prior to its shipment, and also handle the city's ashes prior to their shipment out to sea. The company would also use the plant to handle the other refuse which they now handle at Hecht wharf for $5,500 a year. The additional consideration was to be for temporarily handling the kitchen garbage and ashes.

The committee a week ago were unanimous against this proposition, some favoring a municipal plant, while others favored different propositions. They were to have submitted a report to the Board of Aldermen Tuesday, but could not get together.

TRAINMEN FAVOR STRIKE.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—The age limit of employes on President Baer's Reading railroad has been raised from thirty-five to forty-five years.

NOTED MEN TO ACT AS ALDRICH PALLBEARERS

A group of national litterateurs and other professional men will serve as honorary pall bearers at the funeral of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, which will be held at the Arlington Street Church at 12 o'clock tomorrow.

The list includes Governor Guild, Professor Charles Eliot Norton of Harvard University, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson of Cambridge, William Dean Howells of New York, Richard Watson Gilder of New York, editor of the Century Magazine; Bliss Perry of Boston, editor of the Atlantic Monthly; Hamilton W. Mabie of New York, Henry M. Alden of New York, editor of Harper's Monthly Magazine; Edward L. Burlingame of New York, editor of Scribner's Magazine; Edmund Clarence Stedman of New York, Judge Robert Grant of Boston, Moorfield Storey of Boston, George E. Woodbury of Beverly, Francis Bartlett of Boston and George H. Mifflin.

The services will be conducted by the Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham, pastor of the Arlington Street Church, assisted by the Rev. James De Normandie, pastor of the First (Unitarian) Religious Society of Roxbury. There will be private interment in Mt. Auburn Cemetery, the resting place of many famous authors.

DEFT 'TOUCH' BY FAKE ACTOR LEADS TO CELL

After making a successful "touch" on Norma Seymour, of Joe Hart's "Crickets," for the price of railroad fare to Little Old New York, a man giving the name of George E. Foster, but said by the police to be Edward S. Feltin with a record, ran foul of Milt. Wood's inborn caution and is now in the hands of the police. He comes into Municipal Court to-day on a charge of vagrancy.

On Tuesday Miss Seymour received a letter from Foster, who said he was "up against it," and that he only wanted a ticket to New York, where he had friends. She made an appointment. Foster was there, took the girl's money without winking an eyelash and left. The next day, according to the stories told the police, Foster figured out that the Orpheum crowd was so very "soft" that he would try again. This time he picked out Milt Wood, the buck dancer. But Milt. didn't "fall for it." Instead he made talk about it around the theatre and found that Miss Seymour had given up the railroad fare. Milt. told the police, who hunted for Foster, found him and arrested him.

'WE ARE HAPPY' SAYS LILLIAN KEMBLE IN N. Y.

Actress Refuses to Deny or Affirm Story of Her Wedding to Actor Charles Mackay.

MESSAGE TO AMERICAN

Miss Lillian Kemble will not yet say that she has become the bride of Charles Mackay. Neither will she say she has not. She simply hints that something may happen soon.

In response to a telegram sent by the BOSTON AMERICAN to New York, where Miss Kemble and Mr. Mackay are both appearing at the Savoy Theatre in "The Man of the Hour" company, this message was received to-day:

"Wire received. Cannot deny or affirm at present. Good story in few days. We are happy."

(Signed) "LILLIAN KEMBLE."

It was current report along Broadway that the couple who had appeared together at the Castle Square Theatre, had quietly gone to a secluded spot and there been joined in matrimony. But not a word would they say about it.

Mr. Mackay was recently divorced by his wife, who was Miss Porter, daughter of Linn Boyd Porter, the novelist. Miss Kemble has just secured a divorce from Will Rising.

CATARRH TREATED AND CURED BY "The Household Surgeon"

CATARRH usually occurs in the Throat and Nasal passages, and is an affection which causes irritation, inflammation and soreness of the mucous membranes. To cure the disease and prevent recurrence it is necessary to antiseptically cleanse and heal the affected parts. DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL is a Household Surgical Dressing, which is most efficient for the cure of Catarrh, because of its wonderful antiseptic or cleansing and healing properties. It can be readily sprayed into the Throat and Nose with an Atomizer, and as it is in the form of an Oil, it does not simply vaporize and pass off, but it goes directly to the seat of the trouble. The beneficial effects of the preparation will be noticed immediately, and the most stubborn chronic cases of Catarrh can be cured after a short treatment. Nearly all druggists now sell DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL. Price 25c.

Officially Pronounce Season Here At Noon, Signally End of King Coal's Reign.

SPRING begins at 1 'clock.
Put your overcoat in hock.
Cut out coal and put the price
Into stocking up with ice.
Hope the blessed B. & A.
Gets a warming-up to-day
So its trains will all go through
Something as they ought to do.
Baseball, too—say, maybe we
Will be—Better wait and see
Till the season's underway
And the teams begin to play
Shed your heavy underwear,
Go out in the Springtime air,
Leave a little in the till
For the undertaker's bill.
Woudn't snow produce a shock?
Spring is due at 1 o'clock.

SPRING is officially declared on at 1 o'clock to-day.

No matter what the weather is, it is Spring after you get back from lunch to-day.

If it snows and blows, it is Spring. If the weather has a regular brainstorm, Spring is still on the job.

For the man who made the seasons and set them trotting around the equinoctial track decrees that Spring begins at 1 p. m., March 21, rain or shine, blow hot or blow cold.

We may now look any time for the baseball to blossom on the bat and for the entente cordiale to be resumed between the batter and the umpire.

Day of the Umpire and Ice Man Is Ushered in by the Official Weather Man.

Once more will Boston strive to get the baseball pennant. The "Doves" and the "Chicks," as the new league teams are nicknamed this year, will tear around on their respective diamonds and try to show that Boston is not a baseball paranoiac.

To-day Mamma, having carefully studied all the millinery advertisements, will get a strangle hold on a majority report of father's pay envelope and show her superiority over the masculine gender by paying $27 for an Easter hat, whereas father will pay $2.50 for a new lid, if he gets one.

The coal consumption will grow beautifully less. But the law of compensation, which never faileth, will see to it that the ice bill starts in where the coal bill leaves off, so that the common person will always be behind the financial game.

About this time look for a change in the operation of the Boston & Albany railroad. The frost is coming out of the ground. Likewise the frost which President Newman of the New York Central injected into Boston petitioners should abate a bit. The snows and head winds which delay engine speed on the B. & A. having passed away, these engines will now rival the speed of the bounding trolley.

Now that the harsh air of Winter is modified into the gentler breezes of Spring, the children may be allowed to play in the streets again, where they can be run over by the electric cars without fear of their catching pneumonia.

LESLIE CARTER GETS THE ASTOR THEATRE

NEW YORK, March 21.—Arrangements were completed yesterday whereby Mrs. Leslie Carter secures the Astor Theatre in New York for her productions. The contract, for a term of years, was signed yesterday with Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper. She will inaugurate her season after a short road tour in November.

HOLD MASSEUR ON CHARGE OF BEATING NURSE

Captain Hichborn's Attendant Attacked on March 11 Is Now in Bad Condition.

SKULL MAY BE FRACTURED

As result of a vicious attack said to have been committed in the apartments of Captain Samuel Hichborn, one of the principal assessors of Boston and a former commander of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, his trained nurse, Willard R. Lothrop is in a critical condition in the Massachusetts General Hospital.

His alleged assailant, Charles Stapleton, a muscular masseur with an extensive clientele in the Back Bay, is held by the police of Station 16. He is accused at present of assault with intent to kill, on which charge he will be arraigned in court. It is expected, however, that the police will ask that he be held for continuance, pending the outcome of Lothrop's condition.

Say Assault Was Unprovoked.

The police say the assault was unprovoked, and that Stapleton was under the influence of liquor.

Captain Hichborn lives at No. 263 West Newton street. On account of ill health he has employed Lothrop as his personal attendant for ten years. Lothrop is known as a capable nurse. Stapleton lives at No. 31 Norway street. He is fifty-eight years old, eighteen years older than Lothrop; but Lothrop is of slender build, and would be considered no physical match for the masseur.

Though the attack on Lothrop took place on March 11 it has been kept quiet. On the night of that date Lothrop was attending Captain Hichborn as usual. Stapleton came there to give the captain a massage. After treating his patient, Stapleton stayed in the flat a few minutes, as he frequently did when not pressed for time.

Felled Nurse With a Blow.

Lothrop was in his room. Suddenly, according to the story Lothrop told the police, Stapleton dashed through the hallway yelling to Lothrop:

"I'll kill you."

With that Stapleton jumped on Lothrop, and, before the nurse could guard himself, dealt him a terrific blow on the head with clinched fist. Lothrop fell unconscious, and when he recovered his senses Stapleton had gone.

7TH EVENING IN SPANISH.

The seventh in a series of literary evenings in Spanish will be held this evening at Huntington Chambers by Professor I. F. Romero, LL. D. The program includes, besides the professor's lecture, a concert in Spanish.

NICARAGUANS WHIP 2 ARMIES IN 3-DAY FIGHT

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Dispatches from San Salvador announce the defeat at Portilles de Namasique of the combined armies of Salvador and Honduras by the army of Nicaragua, after a three-days' battle, with severe losses on both sides. The defeated armies sustained a loss of 900 killed and wounded. There were 5,000 men in the battle. Another engagement is expected to-day.

General Jose Delores Presa, commander of the Salvadorean army, in a communication from the battleground at the end of two days of fighting declared that the united armies were winning, that the Nicaraguans were beaten back with "regrettable losses in commanding and other officers," and that "the enemy was dislodged." The battle opened with a heavy artillery fire. Portilles de Namasique is a heavily fortified town.

American interests in the fighting republics have not yet been menaced.

ROUT RAILROAD IN N. H.; ENACT ANTI-PASS BILL

CONCORD, N. H., March 21.—The railroad forces in New Hampshire have been forced to capitulate and allow the passage of an anti-free pass bill in both branches of the Legislature. So affectual was the rout of their "army" that the bill passed both branches yesterday inside of two hours and with only three votes in opposition.

The new bill provides that any member of the Legislature or any other State official who requests, accepts or uses any free pass upon a steam railroad, or any ticket which entitles him to transportation for a less price than is demanded of the public generally, or any railroad official or employe of a steam railroad corporation who knowingly issues, delivers or offers to any such person or to any other person at the request of any such person such free transportation or reduced price ticket, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $100 or more than $1,000.

HOME RULE IS SURE TO COME AS SUNRISE

—British Chancellor.

LONDON, March 21.—Declaring that, like Premier Campbell-Bannerman, he was a Home Ruler, Lord Loreburn, the Lord High Chancellor, created a sensation in the House of Lords last night.

A demand for a disclosure of the ministerial policy regarding Ireland was made by the Earl of Denbigh.

In reply the Earl of Crewe, Lord President of the Council, said the Government's policy was not home rule, but an advance in the direction of self-government, which was not incompatible with an advance toward home rule.

Following this explanation the Marquis of Londonderry, Conservative, declared the people of England had not given a mandate to grant the demands of the Irish.

Then came the striking declaration by Lord Loreburn.

"All roads," Lord Loreburn said, "lead to home rule. It is as certain to come as that to-morrow's sun will rise."

Lord Lansdowne, Liberal-Unionist, said he considered that the remarks of the Lord High Chancellor left no doubt whatever that home rule was the object aimed at by the government.

RARE COAT AND DRESS DISPLAY

Among the many handsome Spring offerings at the Meyer Jonasson store, Tremont and Boylston streets, is a large assortment of new princess dresses and silk jumper suits, beauties in design and finish and attractive to every woman of taste. The store is also offering an extensive line of covert coats and an array of lace and silk coats.

In the waist department there is exhibited an extensive line of new net and lace waists. In the tailored suit department are a choice number of suits from Parisian workshops, and also a large number of designs manufactured in the Meyer Jonasson's own factory in New York city. New cutaway suits for women, the real latest thing out, are being shown, and are proving very popular.

In the separate skirt department there is displayed a large assortment of new skirts in voile, Panama, taffeta, silks, checks and stripes. There are also some very pretty mohair and serge suits.

In the waist department the counters are filled with batiste and lawn waists that are being sold at prices ranging from 95 cents to $36. Many of them are handsomely hand embroidered. The store is also offering waists that are known as the "no-two-alike" kind, the styles being exclusive with the Meyer Jonasson Company.

HUB FURNITURE BOWLERS FEAST

At the annual banquet of the Retail Furniture Bowling League held at the Quincy House last evening, the representatives of the winning teams of the year received handsome cups and other prizes. The recipients were the Atkinson Company for the first team prize, August Cleland for the highest individual score, Jacob Miller for the highest single string, and R. W. E. Howe for the highest three-string score.

M. P. Simpson, president of the league, was toastmaster. The speakers included C. E. Osgood and W. L. Shearer of the Paine Furniture Co. The guests included A. J. Morse of the Shawmut Company, George J. Bicknell of the Atkinson Company, C. W. Luce of the Brooks Company, R. C. Kingsley of the John H. [illegible]y Company, H. B. Schofield of the Plimpton-Hervey Company and J. A. Bicknell of the A. H. Davenport Company.

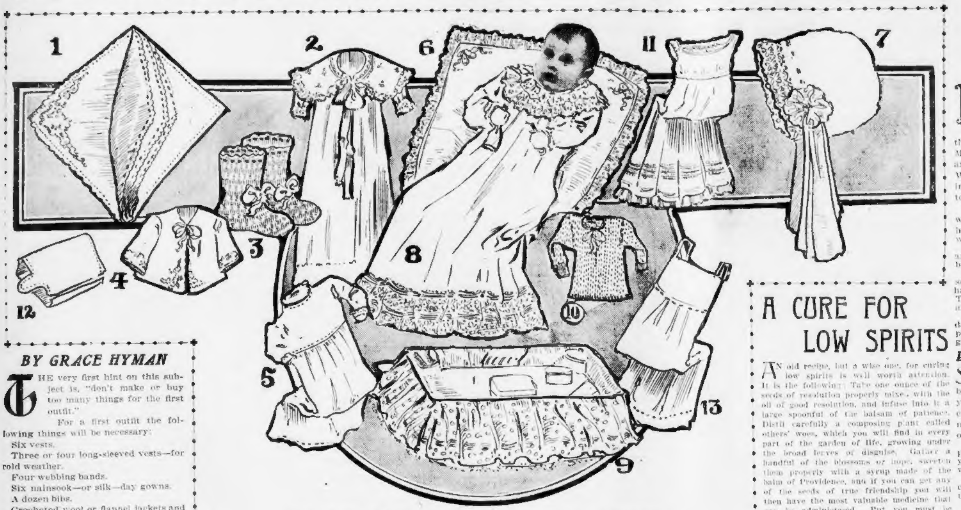
Fashions for Little Tots Change as Do Styles for Grown Ups, and There Are Many New Suggestions in the Latest

COMPLETE WARDROBE FOR THE BABY



THE NECESSARY ARTICLES OF A NEW BABY'S WARDROBE

1, warm shawl; 2. outdoor wrap; 3, bootees; 4, little house coat; 5, night robe; 6, carriage pillow; 7, bonnet; 8, baby's dress; 9, baby's basket; 10, knitted shirt; 11, white skirt; 12, knitted band; 13, flannel under skirt.

BY GRACE HYMAN

THE very first hint on this subject is, "don't make or buy too many things for the first outfit."

For a first outfit the following things will be necessary:

Six vests.

Three or four long-sleeved vests—for cold weather.

Four webbing bands.

Six nainsook—or silk—day gowns.

A dozen bibs.

Crocheted wool or flannel jackets and boots.

A warm wrapping shawl.

Bonnet, cloak and veil for outdoor wear.

Be careful to provide nothing but the softest wool and flannel for all the inner garments.

Make the garments sufficiently large to fit a good-sized baby. If the clothes are made too small you may be in the uncomfortable fix of finding that they won't go on at all!

Reading from right to left, the illustrations are as follows:

First, a warm shawl made of fine flannel or cashmere, scalloped at the edges and embroidered in one corner.

Second, a pretty cloak, also of cashmere, with a wide, circular collar edged with a ruffle of lace.

Third, knitted bootees, of which there should be several pairs.

The fourth is a short jacket, which baby may wear in the house. Many mothers prefer this model made of cashmere to the old-fashioned knitted ones.

Next comes the plain little night robe made of shaker flannel trimmed only by a little lace at the neck, and fastening down the back.

No. 6 is a pretty embroidered pillow which may be used either in the crib or carriage. And next the baby's dress of finest nainsook or lawn, with round yoke of insertion and lace and a ruffle of embroidery. The bottom of the skirt is finished by rows of tucks and insertion and a ruffle of embroidery.

No. 7 is a snug bonnet tied with strings of some washable silk.

Everything that is necessary for baby's comfort is in the pretty basket, and mothers will save themselves many trials if they will keep it well filled with all the toilet articles baby will need in its process of bathing and dressing.

No. 10 is the warm knitted shirt, and No. 12 the knitted band that every baby must wear close to its body.

No. 11 is a picture of the outside white skirt, and No. 14 the flannel one worn underneath it.

No. 13 is an ideal wrap for warm days or to put over baby when being carried from one room to another so that there is no danger of catching cold.

This is a complete outfit and all that is necessary for any baby.

CLEANS SILVER TEAPOT.

TWICE a week, after using, fill the pot with hot soda water, and let it stand for a couple of hours, and then rinse in plenty of warm water. When the teapot is cleaned outside with plate powder it should also be polished inside, and well rinsed before using. Any silver teapot which is not constantly soaked thus will acquire a sediment on the inside from the tea which is most unwholesome.

Don't Be Content to Do Less Than Your Very Best

By Beatrice Fairfax

IT is sad that so many of us are content with our second best. We reach a certain point, and there we stay, smugly complacent.

Not one in ten of us is making the most of life and its opportunities. Moderate success seems to satisfy us, and we sit back content with ourselves. We could all do better than we are doing if we had the grit and perseverance to keep at it.

The trouble with most of us is that we are always going to do better. We have vague ideas as to the great things we will do, but that is as far as we get.

In the meantime the precious hours are slipping behind us and nothing has been done.

If we live to man's allotted three-score-and-ten years (seventy years) we have 25,750 days to make or to mar. That seems a good many, but can you afford to waste one single day of them?

Already a fair share of those 25,750 days have gone. Instead of being impatient for the hours to pass, we should grudge every flying minute.

Be Alert

SO far, what have you made of your life? If you have married and are bringing up a family of girls and boys you have done a great deal; no woman can do more. But even if you do not marry you can still get a great deal out of life.

If you are still young and have the prospect of marrying you can train yourself to be the kind of woman who will make a good wife and mother.

If you are past the marrying age you can help others and make yourself of use in the world.

No one who lives solely for self can be said to have lived at all. The desire to be of use to others brings out all that is best in one. You must be alert, keen to observe, quick to seize opportunity.

The dreamer lives all by himself, in his rose-colored air castle; he is of no to nobody; the world is not one whit the better for his having lived.

But the world is the better for every man and woman who have bravely and unselfishly done their duty.

Do Your Best

ONE of your duties is to do whatever work you may be engaged in to the best of your ability. It may be uncongenial work, but do it as well as you can. Shirking one thing will never help you to find another.

Try to find some bright spot in every day. If you do one kind action during the day your day has not been wasted.

Do not be self-satisfied; that is fatal to progress of any kind. Before you go to bed to-night think over your day. If you had it to live over again would you spend it just as you have done? Most of us would not. Well, we still have to-morrow, and other to-morrows if we live; but we must begin right away. Our lives are such tiny atoms in the vast scheme of eternity, and yet they are everything to us, and it seems incredible that we should not make the most of our brief chance.

No matter how well you do anything, try to do it still better. Don't be satisfied with anything but the very best that you are capable of.

If you feel yourself getting into a rut, try your level best to get out of it as quickly as possible. Remember that this is your chance. The younger you are the more time you have to make something of yourself.

Don't lose your golden opportunity.

A CURE FOR LOW SPIRITS

AN old recipe, but a wise one, for curing low spirits is well worth attention. It is the following: Take one ounce of the seeds of resolution properly mixed with the oil of good resolution, and infuse into it a large spoonful of the balsam of patience. Distil carefully a composing plant called others' woes, which you will find in every part of the garden of life, growing under the broad leaves of disguise. Gather a handful of the blossoms of hope, sweeten them properly with a syrup made of the balm of Providence, and if you can get any of the seeds of true friendship you will then have the most valuable medicine that can be administered. But you must be careful to get the seeds of true friendship, as there is a weed that much resembles it called self-interest, which will spoil the whole composition. These ingredients, well mixed and faithfully taken, soon complete a cure

IS MAN VAINER THAN WOMAN?

WHETHER men or women are the vainer is a question, and it is a little difficult to hold the scales evenly balanced and to give an unbiassed and unprejudiced opinion. One likes to imagine the sterner sex as above the vanities and littleness of the world—god-like beings walking in the path of hard endeavor, marching along to perpetual victory, only faintly moved by the feminine joy, too obvious for the occasion; by the feminine sorrow, a shade too overwhelming, that would hinder them on their way.

Beauty Triumphant

The truth is, that in spite of our reputation for guile we women are too frank over the little things that don't matter. If a girl is good looking she announces to the world that she is well aware of the fact; if her beauty is superior to that of other women, she becomes audacious and crowns her pretty head with some ecstatic piece of millinery that no one else would dare to wear. Her manner is triumphant; she spreads her plumes in the most captivating way, and the men flock round her, crying in their hearts: "See, here is some one vainer than we, let us fall at her feet."

How Man Dissimulates

In the beginning all male things were given greater beauty than the female of the same species. The birds of the air, the fishes of the sea, the beast of the jungle; but this led to so many contests for superiority that life was in danger of extinction. On these lines there was no progression, and when Adam looked on Eve in the Garden of Eden he saw some one more beautiful than himself. Man abdicated, and woman has reigned as Queen of Beauty ever since.

Women are vain, then, by right of election; man is vain by inherited instinct.

Civilization Built on Vanity

But in the Garden man learned dissimulation, and now he hides with perfect success the small fact that the shape of his collars gives him substantial food for thought, and the idea of appearing in raiment that has not been stamped with the approval of convention sends a shiver down the small of his back. If this were not so, surely he would not clothe himself in a stiffly fitting frock coat on a sweltering day in June, nor would he wear with a smile of contentment the hard, high hat of perfect shininess that his soul loves.

Sometimes here and there you do meet a man who is brave enough to announce that vanity is his natural equipment. If he is a rich man he wears more jewelry than is prescribed by custom. If he is only moderately well off the number of his neckties is as countless as the stars in heaven, while his boots require a house to themselves.

We may take it, I think, that vanity has been planted in the human heart for some good and sure purpose. It is vanity pure and simple that leads man to outshine and outstep his fellows; the desperate, haunting fear of being left behind in the race, the dread of not proving himself to be a better man than his neighbors, is at the root of all success. And, surely, if vanity will prod a man to continual and perpetual effort, if it will lead him to work night and day to prove the sort of stuff that he is made of, I say that the civilization of the world is built on vanity—and vanity let it be!

FANCY ROAST.

PUT one pint oysters, with their liquor, inot a sauce pan, and cook until their edges ruffle and the oysters are plump; stir, or shake the pan slightly, that they may not burn; season with salt, pepper and butter, and pour over buttered toast.

MRS. A. R. CHANDLER,
Westport Factory, Westport.

MILK TOAST

TOAST the bread carefully, spread with butter and arrange the slices in the dish in which the toast will be served. Pour over it a little boiling water if the toast seems dry; cover and place in the oven for a few minutes to steam. A very little water is all that is necessary. Drop a teaspoon of butter into a pan and when hot stir in a teaspoon of flour and cook for a minute. Add slowly a cup of milk, stirring constantly. When slightly thickening add a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt; pour this over the toast when ready to serve.

MRS. E. U. LACOUTURE,
No. 46 McDonald street, Fall River.

BAKED ONIONS

PUT six onions in oven and let bake one hour or until soft; then take out and take off outside skins and cut up. Season well with salt pepper and a spoon of olive oil, or butter if preferred, and last two spoons of vinegar. These are very nice and taste different than onions cooked in any other way.

MRS. L. BERNARDINE,
Box No. 569, Calais, Me.

MUSHROOM SAUCE

IN saucepan brown one tablespoon butter until dark, but not burned; add one tablespoon flour; stir and brown again, add gradually one cup good stock (beef is best) or hot water and stir until smooth and thick. Season with salt and pepper to taste, and add one-half cup liquor from canned mushrooms, two tablespoons chopped mushrooms; simmer five minutes.

MISS SIGRID PALMGREN,
No. 8 Dalton street, Boston.

MARBLE CAKE

WHITE part: Half cup butter, one and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup milk, whites of four eggs, 2½ cups flour, one teaspoon cream tartar, one-half of soda. Dark part: One cup brown sugar, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup sour milk, one-half cup butter, yolks four eggs, 2½ cups flour, one-half teaspoon soda, spice to taste.

"THE BRACEBRIDGE DIAMONDS, Or The Heart of a Woman"

By Gregory Townsend

CHAPTER LXIV.—(Continued.)

"I SHALL approach the house through the wooded walk," Mueller decided. "I shall strike into the bypath at the head of the walk and thus get around to the servants' quarters and make inquiries."

About a quarter of an hour later his path led him down to the edge of the walk, and he glanced round him warily, pausing for a moment or two ere he advanced further.

Recognized

This solitary spot seemed to be full of the wild sunset glow that quivered brightly amid the thinning foliage of the trees and fell in dappled lights and shadows upon the mossy sward beneath.

A wistful wind rose and fell amid the matted branches; the crisp leaves rustled dreamily, now and then parting with one of their golden members, which floated softly earthward, to swell the withered heaps around the great gnarled trunks.

The measured beat of the waves on the beach fell on Mueller's ear as he still hesitated—why, he hardly could tell—to advance further. Had he heard a faint sound as of a footstep approaching in the distance, or was it but the rustle of the October wind in the withered leaves?

He had paused in the shadow of a great beechtree, but now, hesitating no longer, he emerged from his place of ambush and went rapidly down the sloping bank into the walk. And the moment he did so a girl's figure suddenly confronted him—a figure which had come up from the shore and had kept purposely in the shadow as it approached.

Carl Mueller started violently, with an exclamation of surprise and dismay.

"Miss Creswell!"

The name escaped his lips involuntarily.

Ethel Creswell leaned forward a little and looked fixedly into the man's face.

"Dr. Newell of Black Horse Inn poisoning fame? I thought so. I guessed that I could not possibly be mistaken!"

CHAPTER LXV.

A Desperate Move

DR. MUELLER recoiled a little from Ethel Creswell, involuntarily clenching his right hand upon his walking stick, as if he felt an impulse to defend himself from some enemy's attack.

"I—I fail to understand you," he gasped, after a momentary pause; he had already arranged a desperate plan of action. "You are a stranger to me, although, of course, I guessed that you must be Miss Creswell when I saw you now, from your likeness to your young sister, whom I met recently at The Hollow."

"Oh, pray, Dr. Newell, give me credit for ordinary intelligence at least!" Ethel Creswell returned scornfully, although her voice was shaking, and so was her slim, tall figure. "I was too well acquainted with you that time in Tarrytown to make any mistake now, I should think. My sister had seen you only once, as you remember, so that she could not, of course, be absolutely certain of your identity."

A lump seemed to rise in Ethel's throat and for a moment she was unable to proceed.

But Mueller was now silent; a chalky pallor was stealing over his face. He looked like an evil spirit detected.

"From what my sister told me I had suspicions, and when Sylvia showed me your photograph I was still more impressed and puzzled," Ethel Creswell resumed, gaining courage as she proceeded. "Your leaving home abruptly on the day of my expected coming and your continued absence during my visit added still further to my misgivings; and at last I decided to come to the root of the matter by means of a little strategem.

A Girl's Strategy

"I simply pretended to Sylvia that I should have to leave yesterday, and just before the time of my supposed departure arrived I changed my mind and said I'd wait until to-morrow—in the hope of seeing you, I added.

"Well, Dr. Newell, I have seen you, and I am satisfied—satisfied as to your identity, I mean, of course. But I should like very much indeed to know how it comes about that you and Dr. Mueller—Sylvia's husband—are one and the same person.

"When I last saw you, as you thoroughly well remember, you were in the sick room of your first wife—Pattie Pollard—the wretched creature who either poisoned herself to escape your cruelty, or was poisoned by your own hand, as I strongly suspect, I must say!"

Still Mueller was silent, his hand clenched spasmodically around the top of his cane. He was endeavoring to realize this unlooked for situation—endeavoring to decide finally upon his own action in the matter—before he trusted himself to speak again.

At first he had thought of meeting Ethel Creswell's charges with a complete denial and a plea of total ignorance and mistaken identity. But further reflection caused him to waver in this decision. Ethel Creswell was too certain of her position to be hoodwinked by a childish ruse of the kind.

"Dr. Newell's" Record

"I strolled down to the lake shore an hour ago, so as to leave Sylvia and her mother alone together at the house, as I guessed Mrs. Thurston, when she called this afternoon, wished for a private talk with her daughter.

"And when I was returning from the beach I saw you coming down the path, and I recognized you at once and kept out of sight until you entered the walk. I am horrified at the discovery, Dr. Newell!" Ethel suddenly cried, the forced steadiness of her voice and manner giving way at last to the true agitation that overwhelmed her. "To think that you—you, of all other men alive—should have married Sylvia Thurston! You!"

She turned away from him as the words passed her lips, walked a few steps down the path, and, with hands clasped together, gazed out on the lake with shocked, abstracted eyes. Her thoughs had flashed back to the time a little over three years ago when she had first seen this man, "Dr. Newell," or whatever his true name was.

She had gone to Tarrytown to a country rectory to her first nursing case, and during her walks when off duty with Miss Trenerry, the rector's daughter, she had frequently met Pattie Pollard and "Dr. Newell" together, and Miss Trenerry had explained the story of these two to her companion.

"Dr. Newell," it appeared, had been staying for nearly a year at the Black Horse Inn, and when he was about to leave some unpleasant scenes occurred there between Job Pollard, the innkeeper, and himself, and matters were suddenly hushed up by a hasty marriage between "Dr. Newell" and Pattie Pollard—a pretty girl of her own rather ordinary type, to whom the "Doctor" since his arrival at the Inn had been paying somewhat marked attentions.

Victim of Poison

Since their marriage, Miss Trenerry explained, "Dr. Newell" and his wife had never left the Black Horse Inn, and it was whispered about the neighborhood that Pattie was an unhappy wife, that her husband was very unkind to her, and that she bitterly regretted her marriage.

Listening to this explanation, and watching the faces of "Dr. Newell" and his bride, Ethel Creswell had taken a strong dislike to the "Doctor," a sentiment which heightened when Ethel became acquainted with Pattie, one day that Miss Trenerry and herself had sought shelter at the Black Horse Inn from a thunderstorm.

After this day Ethel had frequently during her walks called at the Inn to see Pattie, and had in this way made the acquaintance of "Dr. Newell."

She had met him some half-dozen times during her stay at the rectory, and when Agnes Creswell had come for a few days to see her sister (Agnes had been staying with some school friends), Ethel took her one afternoon to the Inn, and thus she also had met "Dr. Newell."

But some weeks before Ethel's departure from Tarrytown the news reached her that Pattie Newell was seriously ill, and she went at once to see her. She found her in her bedroom at the Inn in a decidedly critical state, her husband apparently feeling the utmost concern for Pattie's precarious condition.

"She has been in bed for the past ten days, Miss Creswell," "Dr. Newell" said. "I begin to fear that the old doctor here does not understand her case—and I am thinking of wiring for a specialist."

Two days later Pattie died, and owing to certain peculiar circumstances in connection with her death, a post-mortem examination was held on the remains, and unmistakable proof obtained that "Dr. Newell's" wife had died from arsenical poisoning!

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

MUCH TOO YOUNG

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of seventeen years of age and reside in the city. A friend of mine lives in Long Island and he has a sister about sixteen years of age, whom I dearly love. I have known her parents and her for fully six years; in fact, we were brought up together. Every time I go to their house in Long Island I get a warm and hearty reception from both her parents and herself and they treat me as if I were their son, and after I am there a while, in the presence of her parents, she will say to me: "I love you, Ben," and as I am bashful, I do not answer her, but blush. I am making a good salary for a boy of my age, $18 a week now, and I am sure of expecting a raise of $2 in a week or so. Will you advise me to take this girl out this Summer and encourage her for later days, or shall I leave her alone for another two or three years. I am not thinking of matrimony at present.

BENJAMIN.

YOU are much too young to even think of matrimony or love-making as yet. The girl's parents should not allow her to tell a young man that she loves him. I do not wonder that you blush and feel embarrassed. Put all such nonsense out of your head for the next few years. Work and save your money, and when you are old enough you will have something to offer a girl.

TOMORROW'S BEST BARGAINS IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

THAT a penny saved is a penny earned is philosophy that applies with equal force to dollars. The province of woman, the conservative element of the race, is to watch that there shall be no waste of either, and just in proportion as she does this wisely is she the good wife and mother. For her guidance the following suggestions are given.

MEYER JONASSON CO. will have an astonishing bargain in the balance of their Winter suits, which they will close out at a fraction of their actual cost. There are fourteen suits in the lot and they are of extra fine broadcloth, mixtures, etc., in blue, black and grays, reduced from $65 and $58 to $12.50—much less than the cost of making. The materials are the finest and the styles exclusive and suitable for next season. They also have a small lot of imported flannel and nun's veiling waists, marked from $5 and $3.50 to close at 95 cents. Be early or you'll be left.

R. H. STEARNS have an offering sure to attract those who have expensive tastes but modest pocketbooks. These are beautifully embroidered Japanese 27-inch centrepieces, done, as the Japanese embroidery always is, as exquisitely on one side as the other. From $22.50 and $18 these have been reduced to $10. Each centrepiece is put up in a handsome, artistically decorated Japanese lacquer box. For Easter or wedding gifts few things could be found more suitable at so modest a price. They have only a few, so see them early.

BUTLER'S, among their special "Friday only" offerings will have Cuticura soap 15 cents a cake—only three cakes to a customer; also women's fast black hose at 9 cents and 12½ cents, values 19 cents and upwards.

ALEXANDER CO. offer $1.50 and $2 night robes for $1.25 to-morrow only. These gowns are in three different styles. One style of cambric gown has the V-shaped neck, yoke trimmed with tucks, neck and sleeves edged with lace. Then there is the chemise style, made of nainsook, low round neck, sleeves finished with Val. lace, insertion and lace. The other style is a nainsook chemise, two rows of lace insertion trimming the yoke, low round neck and pretty, short puffed sleeves, finished with lace edge. These are all made large and full.

HOUGHTON & DUTTON CO. have secured a large assortment of lace door panels for front doors, which are offered at special bargain prices for to-morrow. They are mostly white and have Irish point and renaissance motifs in centres, mounted on good quality net. Regular prices on these would range from 50 cents to 98 cents each, and they are offered at 19 cents, 29 cents and 49 cents.

HOLLANDER'S will have bargains in lisle and cotton hose, offering 50-cent to $1 styles for 35 cents; these are embroidered with dots. Their $2.25 silk hose, in all colors to match gowns and shoes, will be reduced to $1.25 per pair, and they will also put on sale heavy spun silk hose, $1.50 and $1.75 values, for $1.

DODGE-SPEAR CO. will have in their bargain basement a feature sure to please the thrifty housekeeper. These are large double bed size sheets, 81x90, offered to-morrow for only 45 cents—scarcely two-thirds of their value.

MACDONNELL'S Tremont Temple store offers about 66 boxes of ladies' fine quality, pure linen, plain hemstitched handkerchiefs, six in box, at 50 cents a box. They have never sold less than 75 cents. This offer is good for Friday only.

"FRIDAY THE 13TH"

Synopsis.

FRIDAY, THE 13TH, opens with a scene of a terrible panic on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange by Robert Brownley, a broker who had previously handled stocks for Randolph & Randolph, a New York banking firm of integrity.

James Randolph, the head of this firm, and Robert Brownley of Richmond, Va., were graduated together from Harvard College. Then entered the firm of Randolph & Randolph. Bob Brownley was given a seat on the exchange, and a few years later paid back all that it cost.

Randolph married, but Brownley never looked at women. Several years passed and Brownley made a small fortune. He refused to join the firm of Randolph & Randolph although pressed by his friend "Jim" to do so.

Beulah, daughter of Judge Lee Sands of Virginia, came to Brownley one day and asked him to get her a position in the Randolph banking house. Her father, a friend of the Brownleys, had lost a million of his own and more than a million of trust funds. He had six months in which he might recoup without being discovered, and his beautiful daughter, with $60,000, wanted to plunge in stocks and save her father.

Brownley, who fell in love with her, readily consented to help her, and she was taken into the Randolph brokerage house as private secretary.

Bob Brownley, three months after the young woman came to New York, planned to bull Sugar and got the girl a million and a half. Randolph helped him with a million. Bob ran the stock up until he had enough to clear the indebtedness of Judge Sands. He was telling her when the telephone called him from the office to the floor of the exchange, which he had plunged into turmoil.

Bob learned that Barry Conant, representing the Sugar Trust and Standard Oil, was hammering Sugar down. Bob's buying power was exhausted and he sought to save something from the wreck for Beulah Sands by throwing over his stock as fast as he could. With all hope gone Bob returned and confessed defeat to Beulah Sands. Beulah uttered the one cry "Bob" and Brownley took her in his arms.

Bob told her that from the wreck he had saved $400,000, but she insisted that her share in the losses would leave her but $30,000 capital. Then Bob avoided Beulah Sands. With but one month remaining of the six months in which she had to recoup her father's losses to avoid discovery, Beulah sent for Bob. He told Beulah he had lost his confidence and feared to speculate.

Beulah Sands rushed to him and threw her arms about his neck and told him she loved him. Then they talked about the stock market, and what Bob could do. Beulah read a letter from her father in which he commanded her to write him if there was any hope, if not he wanted to know. Beulah then told how her father had lost his money and the trust money in the Seaboard line through Reinhart and the "System" after he had fought hard to save the road.

Beulah wrote her father a long letter advising him to prepare himself for bad tidings. Judge Sands would receive this letter on Friday, the 13th. Bob Brownley told Jim Randolph that sugar was going to soar and that Barry Conant and the "System" were preparing for another killing. Bob told Jim that he was going to turn the tables on the "System," but Jim could not understand him. Next day sugar soared and the wise brokers held aloof, predicting a grand slaughter of the lambs on the following day, Friday, the 13th.

CHAPTER V.

THURSDAY, November 12th, was a memorable day in Wall Street. As the gong pealed its the-game's-closed-till-another day, the myriad of tortured souls that are supposed to haunt the treacherous bogs and quicksands of the great Exchange, where lie their earthly hopes, must have prayed with renewed earnestness for its destruction before the morrow.

Never had the Stock Exchange folded its tents with surer confidence of continuing its victorious march. Sugar advanced with record-breaking total sales to 207¼ and in the final half-hour carried the whole list of stocks up with it.

In that time some of the railroads jumped ten points. Sugar closed at the very top amid great excitement, with Barry Conant taking all offered.

During the last thirty minutes it had become evident to all that the board-room traders and plungers, together with many of the semi-professional gamblers, who operated through commission houses, were selling out their long stock and going short over the opening of the Wall Street hoodoo-day, Friday, the thirteenth of the month.

But it was also evident, with the heavy selling at the close and the stiffness of the price, which had never wavered as block after block was thrown on the market, that some powerful interest as well had taken cognizance of the fact that the morrow was hoodoo-day.

At the close, most of the sellers, had they been granted another five minutes, would have repurchased, even at a loss, what they had sold, for it looked as though they had sold themselves into a trap.

Their anxiety was intensified by the publication, a few minutes later, of this item:

"Barry Conant in coming from the Sugar crowd after the close remarked to a fellow broker, 'By 3 o'clock to-morrow, Friday, the 13th, will have a new meaning to Wall Street.' This was interpreted as pointing to a terrific jump in Sugar to-morrow."

"The Street" knew that the news bureau that sent out this item was friendly to Barry Conant and the "System," and that it would print nothing displeasing to them. Therefore, this must be a foreword of the coming harvest of the bulls and the slaughter of the bears.

Others than Ike Bloomstein remarked upon the fact that Bob Brownley had hung close to the Sugar pole all day, but when the close had come and gone without his having anything to do with the Sugar skyrockets, he dropped out of his fellow-brokers' minds.

Wall Street has no use for any but the "doer." The poet and the mooner would be no more secure from interruption in the centre of the Sahara than in Wall Street between 10 and 3 o'clock.

Some sage has said that the human mind, like the well bucket, can carry only its fill. The Wall Street mind always has its fill of budding dollars. In consequence, there is never room for those other interests that enter the normal mind.

Friday.

Friday, the thirteenth of November, drifted over Manhattan Island in a drear drizzle of marrow-chilling haze, which just missed being rain—one of those New York days that give a hesitating suicide renewed courage to cut the mortal coil.

By ten o'clock it had settled down on the Stock Exchange and its surrounding infernos with a clamminess that damped the spirits of the most rampant bulls.

No class in the world is so susceptible to atmospheric conditions as stock gamblers. Many a stout-hearted one has been known to postpone the inauguration of a long-planned coup merely because the air filled his blood with the dank chill of superstition.

Because of the expected Sugar pyrotechnics Stock Exchange members had gathered early; the brokers' offices were crowded to overflowing before 10: the morning papers, not only in New York, but in Boston, Philadelphia and other centres, were filled with stories of the big rise that was to take place in Sugar.

The knowing ones saw the ear-marks of the "System's" press agent in these stories, and they knew that this industrious institution had not sat up the night before because of insomnia.

All the signs pointed to a killing, and a terrific one—pointed so plainly that the bears and Sugar shorts found no hope in the atmosphere or the date.

Bob had not been near the office the afternoon before, and as he had not come in by five minutes to ten I decided to go over to the Exchange and see if he were going to mix up in the baiting of the Sugar bears.

I had no special reason for thinking he was interested except his recent queer actions, particularly his hanging to the Sugar-pole, yet doing nothing, the day before. But it is one of the best-established traditions of stock-gambledom that when an operator has been bitten by a rabid stock he is invariably attracted to it every time afterward that it shows signs of frothing.

More than all, I had one of those strong nowhere-born-nowhere-cradled intuitions common to those living in the stock-gambling world, which made me feel the creepy shadow of coming events.

As on that day a few weeks before, the crowd was at the Sugar-pole, but its alignment was different. There in the centre were Barry Conant and his trusted lieutenants, but no opposing rival.

None of those hundreds of brokers showed that desperate resolve to do or die that is born of a necessity. They were there to buy or sell, but not to put up a life or death, on-me-depends-the-result fight.

Those who were long of stock could easily be distinguished by their expressions of joy from the shorts, who had seen the handwriting on the wall and were filled with uncertainty, fear, terror.

The demeanour of Barry Conant and his lieutenants expressed confidence; they were going to do what they were there to do. They showed by their tight-buttoned coats and squared shoulders that they expected lots of rush, push, and haul work, but apparently they anticipated no last-ditch fighting.

The gong pealed and the crowd of brokers sprang at one another, but only for blood, not flesh, bone, heart, and soul; just blood.

A "Wash."

The first price on Sugar was 211 for 3,000 shares. Someone sold it in a block. Barry Conant bought it. It did not require three eyes to see that the seller was one of his lieutenants.

This meant what is known as a "wash" sale, a fictitious one arranged in advance between two brokers to establish the basis for the trades that are to follow—one of those minor frauds of stock-gambling by which the public is deceived and the traders and plungers are handicapped with loaded dice.

In principle, it is a device older than stock exchanges themselves, and is put to use elsewhere than on the floor.

For instance, four genuine buyers want a particular animal worth $200 at a horse auction. Its owner's pal starts the bidding at $400, and the four, not being up in horse values, are thereby induced to reach for it at between $400 and $500.

But human nature, whether at horse sales or at stock gambling, loves to be "hinky-dinked" as much as the moth loves to play tag with the candle flame.

In five minutes Sugar was selling at 221, and the frantic shorts were grabbing for it as though there never was to be another share put on sale, while Barry Conant and his lieutenants were most industriously pushing it just beyond their reaching fingertips, either by buying it as fast as it was offered by genuine sellers or by taking what their own pals threw in the air.

I was not surprised to see Bob's tall form wedged in the crowd about two-thirds of the way from the centre. Every other active floor member was there, too. Even Ike Bloomstein and Joe Barnes, who seldom went into the big crowds, were on hand, perhaps to catch a flier for their Thanksgiving turkey money, perhaps to get as near the killing as possible.

Bob was not trading, although, as on the day before, he never took his eye off Barry Conant. I said to myself, "He is trying to fathom Barry Conant's movements," but for what purpose puzzled me.

The hands of the big clock on the wall showed that trading had been thirty minutes under way and still Barry Conant was pushing up the price. His voice had just rung out "25 for any part of 5,000," when, like an echo, sounded through the hall, "Sold."

It was Bob. He had worked his way to the centre of the crowd and stood in front of Barry Conant. He was not the Bob who had taken Barry Conant's gaff that afternoon a few weeks before. I never saw him cooler, calmer, more self-possessed. He was the incarnation of confident power. A cold, cynical smile played around the corners of his mouth as he looked down upon his opponent.

The effect upon Barry Conant was different from that of Bob's last bid on the day when Beulah Sands's hopes went skyward in dust. It did not rouse him to the wild, furious desire for the onslaught that he showed then, but seemed to quicken his alert, prolific mind to exercise all its cunning.

I think that in that one moment Barry Conant recalled his suspicions of the day before, when he had wondered what Bob's presence in the crowd meant, and that he saw again the picture of Bob on the day when he himself had ditched Bob's treasure train.

The Encounter.

He hesitated for just the fraction of a second, while he waved with lightning-like rapidity a set of finger signals to his lieutenants. Then he squared himself for the encounter. "Twenty-five for 5,000."

Cold, cold as the voice of a condemning judge rang Bob's "Sold."

"Twenty-five for 5,000."

"Sold."

"Twenty-five for 5,000."

"Sold."

Their eyes were fixed upon each other, in Barry's a defiant glare, in Bob's mingled pity and contempt.

The rest of the brokers hushed their own bids and offers until it could have truthfully been said that the floor of the Stock Exchange was quiet, an almost unheard-of thing in like circumstances.

Again Barry Conant's voice, "25 for 5,000."

"Sold."

"Twenty-five for 5,000."

"Sold."

Barry Conant had met his master.

Whether it was that for the first time in all his wonderful career he realized that the "System" was to meet its Nemesis, or what the cause, none could tell, perhaps not even Barry Conant himself, but some emotion caused his olive face for an instant to turn pale, and gave his voice a tell-tale quiver.

Once more pealed forth "25 for 5,000."

That Bob saw the pallor, that he caught the quiver was evident to all, for the instant his "Sold" rang out, he followed it with "5,000 at 24, 23, 22, 20."

Neither Barry Conant nor any of his lieutenants got in a "Take it"; although whether they wanted to or not was an open question until Bob allowed his voice to dwell just a pendulum swing of time on the 20.

It was as if he were tantalising them into sticking by their guns. By the time he paused Barry Conant's nerve was back, for his piercing "Take it" had linked to it "20 for any part of 10,000."

The bid was yet on his lips when Bob's deep voice rang out "Sold."

"Any part of 25,000 at 19, 18, 15, 10."

Hell was now loose.

Back and forth, up against the rail, around the room and back and around again, the crowd surged for fifteen of the wildest, craziest minutes in the history of the New York Stock Exchange, a history replete with records of wild and crazy scenes.

At last from sheer exhaustion there came a ten minutes' lull, which was used in comparing trades. At the beginning of the respite Sugar was selling at 155, for in that quarter-hour of madness it had broken from 210 to 155, but when the ten minutes had elapsed the stock had worked back to 167.

Reinforced.

Barry Conant had again taken the centre of the crowd after scanning the brief notes handed him by messenger boys and giving orders to his lieutenants. He had evidently received reinforcements in the form of renewed orders from his principals.

Many of the faces that fringed the inner circle of that crowd were frightful to look upon, some white as though just lifted from hospital pillows, others red to the verge of apoplexy—all strained as though awaiting the coming of the jury with a life or death verdict.

They all knew that Bob had sold more than a hundred thousand shares of Sugar upon which the profits must be more than four million dollars.

Would he resume selling or was he through?

Was it short stock, which must be bought back, or long stock; and if long, whose stock?

Were the insiders selling out on one another, or were they all selling together, and under cover of Barry Conant's movements were Camemeyer and "Standard Oil" emptying their bag preparatory to the slaughter of the Washington contingent.

All these questions were rushing through the heads of that crowd of brokers like steam through a boiler, now hot, now cold, but always at high pressure, for upon the correctness of the answers depended the fortune of many who breathlessly awaited the renewal or the suspension of the contest.

Even Barry Conant's usually impassive face wore a tinge of anxiety.

Indeed, Bob's was the only one in the centre of that throng that showed no sign of what was going on behind it. The same cynical smile that had been there since the opening still played around the corners of his mouth as he squared himself in front of his opponent.

All knew now that he was not through. Barry Conant had evidently decided to force the fighting, although more cautiously than before. "Sixty-seven for a thousand."

One of his lieutenants bid 67 for 500, another 67 for 300, and as Bob had not yet shown his intention of meeting their bids, 67 for different amounts was heard all over the crowd.

Bob might have been tossing a mental coin to decide the advisability of buying stock back what he had sold; he might have been adding up the bids as they were made. He said nothing for a fraction of a minute, which to those tortured ones must have seemed like an age.

Then with a wave of his hand, as though delivering a benediction, he swept the circle with a cold-blooded, "Sold the lots; 5,000 in all."

"Sixty-seven for a thousand"—again Barry Conant's bid.

"Sold."

"Sixty-seven for 5,000."

"Sold."

"Sixty-six for a thousand."

"Sold."

The drop from 5,000 to 1,000 and a dollar a share in Barry Conant's bids was the mortally wounded but still game general's "Sound the retreat." Bob heard it.

"Any part of 10,000 at 65, 64, 62, 60."

The din was now as fierce as before. The entire crowd, all but Barry Conant and his lieutenants, seemed to have concluded that Bob's renewal of attack meant that his was the winning side, and those who had been hanging on to their stock, hoping against hope, and those who were short and had been undecided whether to cover or to hold on and sell more for greater profits, vied with another in a frantic effort to sell.

All could now feel the coming panic. All could see that it was to be a bad one, as the least informed on the floor knew that there was a tremendous amount of Sugar stock in the hands of Washington novices at speculation and of others who had bought it at high prices.

Sugar was now dropping two, three, five dollars a share between trades, and the panic was spreading to the other poles, as is always the case, for when there are sudden large losses in one stock, the losers must throw over the other stocks they hold to meet this loss, and thus the whole structure tumbles like a house of cards.

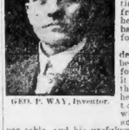
Sugar had just crossed 110 when the loud bang of the president's gavel resounded through the room. Instantly there was a silence as of death.

All knew the meaning of the sound, the most ominous ever heard in a stock exchange, calling for the temporary suspension of business while the president announces the failure of some member or house.

T Be Continued To-morrow.

THE DEAF MAY HEAR

The Story of the Electrical Engineer, Geo. P. Way, Whose Lost Hearing Was Restored by His Own Invention.



GEO. P. WAY, Inventor.

About nine years ago Mr. Geo. P. Way, electrical engineer of the Detroit Young Men's Christian Association, could scarcely hear the roaring of his own engines and dynamos as he passed among them. Today he is to all appearances possessed of perfect hearing. Yet when he removes two tiny devices from his ears he is quite as badly off as before.

Mr. Way's deafness had been increasing for years until it had reached the point where he was unable to hear his wife's voice across the dinner table, and his usefulness as an engineer was seriously threatened. It happened, as Mr. Way tells it, that he was at his post in the dynamo room one day, nearly nine years ago, and as the buzzing in his ears bothered him more than usual he placed a curiously shaped tuft of waste in his right ear. Then a most thrilling thing happened. In the midst of the silence that is the torment of one shut off from the sounds of the busy world, there came a terrible crashing sound as of an earthquake, and Mr. Way bounded across the room, terror-stricken. Then the amazed engineer sat down in his chair and tried to realize what had happened. Unconsciously he pulled the tuft of waste from his ear. Instantly he returned to the awful silence that had enveloped him for years. The sound of the machinery came to him as far away; he no longer heard his assistant's curious questions. Then the truth came to him, and he realized that a new day had dawned for him. Mr. Way rushed home to tell his wife the good news. Then for five years he experimented constantly to put his accidental discovery to use.

The Way Ear Drum was the result of his labors, and he wore it with splendid results. Others, of course, heard of the marvel, and he was overwhelmed with requests for one of these little ear phones from friends as well as from people of whom he never knew.

A number of wealthy business men in Detroit, who have known Mr. Way for years, knew of his deafness and the marvelous results which his invention had brought, gave him full financial backing and endorsement, that he might extend, to the largest possible limit, the blessings which his wonderful ear drums bring to those who are suffering from impaired hearing and deafness. Patents have been granted in all foreign countries, and literally thousands of the drums have been sold in every part of the world, and every day witnesses a large increase in the volume of demand, as the sale of one pair of the drums in any locality produces many other sales. Nine persons out of every ten who have tried the Way Ear Drums have been benefited by them and naturally are quick to testify of their value to fellow-sufferers.

Mr. Way, whose home office is in the Majestic Bldg., Detroit, Mich., believes there are very few cases of deafness that his drums will not relieve, and he is anxious to meet the deaf and those who suffer from impaired hearing.

Mr. Way, while an expert himself in the knowledge of the ear and the various conditions which produce impaired hearing and deafness, by reason of his own personal experience in treating himself successfully, yet gives added assurance of his earnestness to help all those who call upon him in the fact that he is accompanied during his visit to Boston by Dr. F. M. Way, of Detroit, one of the eminent and successful specialists in the treatment of the ear, located in that city. Those who call upon Mr. Way will thus have the benefit of a thorough professional examination and counsel, as well as the great advantage of meeting one who has gone through the deep waters of personal suffering, who was deaf himself and by his own efforts brought back his hearing. So do not hesitate to call upon Mr. Way if your hearing is defective. Appointments can be made by telephone with Mr. Way by those who desire private consultation.

Mr. Way is at the Quincy House. Will remain there until March 30th. All who are deaf should be sure to call on him. It will cost nothing to learn whether he can help you or not.

Take the elevator and the attendant will show you to Mr. Way's parlors.

Nelson Writes Third Story in Series for the Boston American

STRIVE TO IMPROVE SAYS DANE

No. 3, Nelson Series—"The punch that lands is worth more than a hundred feints that beat the air," says Battling Nelson in the third of the series of remarkable articles he has written especially for the BOSTON AMERICAN. Later Nelson will describe a new race of people discovered in Londin known as the "toffs." His article for to-day follows:

BY BATTLING NELSON.

I've got a notion that the English fighters have lost their punch because their country has stopped growing.

Everything is old-fashioned over there. The man who lived fifty years ago in England didn't miss many modern advantages. England hasn't kept pace with the times.

They don't do many things over there any better to-day than they did half a century ago.

London Taking on Fat.

London thinks it is growing, too.

It is getting bigger.

But it is like an old man taking on fat.

It would be better if the town went into training and got rid of some of its weight.

The whole country of England I believe has also stopped growing.

With a man as soon as he stops developing he begins to lose ground.

I think it is the same thing with England and some of the other old countries.

They've reached their limit and they are going back.

Every pound they take on from now on is just so much useless, harmful fat.

When a man discovers he has got a punch he starts to develop it.

Every man that ever grew a good, winning punch got it by hard work.

This talk about a man being born with a punch is all wrong.

The power is there, but it is latent.

Fitzsimmons as Example.

Look at Fitzsimmons. All his life he was developing his punch. Suppose he had stopped when he was twenty-five or twenty-eight years old on the theory that a man doesn't grow any more after that. Well, if he had Fitz would never have been heard of outside of the bushes of Australia.

There's the straight tip to all of us Americans.

We've got the punch now.

It's the best punch that any nation has ever yet developed.

Every skyscraper is a winning punch.

Every time the census shows that the age limit is increasing there's another punch:

BUT WE'VE GOT TO KEEP ON DEVELOPING

If we stop now we will be in the back-number class in a hundred years. Then there won't be any more American champions. The fellows from South Africa or Australia or Alaska will be showing us stunts just like we're showing them over in England.

The tip is that we ought to go the limit, develop as far as possible before we begin to go back.

Out After Improvement.

The people of this country have always been out after improvement. The old-fashioned things didn't look good to us, so we went out and invented new ones to take their place.

For a long time Americans copied the style of the English fighters.

They were good boxers, and that was all that was thought necessary. Then we began getting new ideas into the game.

We discovered that one good punch, straight out, that lands, is worth fifty feints, which rat-tat-tap—on the air and land nowhere.

The old boxers used to hit hard too, but they telegraphed when they were going to do it and by the time the punch got to its destination there was nobody home. The other fellow had just left.

Then it was up to the Yankees to learn how to hit a new kind of punch.

The fault with the old system was that a boxer had to get "set," that is he had to get into the right position before he could deliver his punch. He had to work his feet with a kind of pas ma la movement. Sometimes if he was going to hit an extra hard biff he shut his eyes just before he whaled away.

Develop New Punch.

The Yankees began practicing new ways to deliver a punch.

Jim Corbett was one of the first to learn it.

Corbett's method was to hit from any old angle without ever drawing back his fist.

ZING!

He shot out his fist like that. It went so fast the other fellow couldn't see it coming.

Perhaps they would have discovered the same thing in England if they had not been so niggardly in their treatment and payment of boxers.

The English fighters don't have the money to train and they can't make the experiments.

The question is, will Americans keep up their improvement so that they will continue to lead the world in boxing the same as in everything else?

I believe that fighters will improve as long as the country generally continues to improve. When this country reaches the height of its development then the fighters will have reached the limit of their punches.

When other countries begin beating us out in inventions, in better methods of living, when they begin to ship more things into this country than we ship out, then I believe that some of these incoming ships will carry men who will beat the best of our fighters.

When He Will Go Back.

They'll have something new in the punch line to show us.

We won't know what it is like until we read the next day how it tumbles us in our pride. And perhaps the next flock of ships that blow in will be ironclads.

"These fellows have lost their punch. If our fighters can lick their fighters, our armies and navies can beat theirs," they will argue.

But it's a cinch that that will be a long time away.

Americans are getting better all of the time.

Its when we get too big, too fat and too lazy that we will begin drifting toward has-been land.

Now, what I am trying to impress on you is this:

When you think you've reached your limit it's time to retire.

When a man says to himself "I can't get any better" he won't win any more battles.

This holds good whether you're a fighter, a doctor, a lawyer, or a traveling salesman.

It doesn't make any difference what you are.

A man's best fights are won when he's growing, when his development is expanded. When he's reached his very best he may win a few fights, but they won't be of the impressive kind.

Has New Comparison.

When I went to school I learned about comparison. I learned about good and better and best.

I've watched things pretty carefully and so far as my business goes the comparison doesn't end with best. It stops there a bit and then goes down hill again. Here's the comparison for a fighter:

Good, better, best; not so good, worse, bum.

Think it over and see if I'm not right. Look at the records of fighters, ball players, athletes in general, or use the same test for business standards.

Here's the tip for all of us:

It's better to be "BETTER" than to be "BEST."

When we're in the "better" class there's something ahead.

Can't Stay Best Long.

When we finally reach the "best" class we're done. We can't stay at "best" long, and it's a short, fast trip back to "bum."

That isn't a pretty word, but it's what they call a fighter who has seen his best days and hasn't saved his money while he had the punch. He's fat and slow and old and battered out, but, as they say, "He's still in the ring."

But if he had any gumption he would have saved his money and he wouldn't need to be "still in the ring."

A. A. A. HAS SET TO WORK TO BRING ABOUT ERECTION OF SUITABLE SIGN BOARDS

BY. J. C. KERRISON.

The touring committee of the A. A. A., realizing that it has other duties to perform besides caring for the Glidden tour, has set to work to bring about the erection of suitable sign boards along main travelled routes. Each member of the committee has been requested by the chairman of the committee to see what efforts his respective club is making toward the proper posting of such roads. Here in Massachusetts the local clubs have done excellent work in this direction, while the Massachusetts State Automobile Association has taken steps to secure the erection of something like 500 sign boards before the close of the riding season.

The Wachusett Automobile Club, of which but little is heard, has already done a great amount of work in this direction, last year erecting sign boards on all the main roads in its section of the State. The main roads of Massachusetts and, especially those between Boston and Worcester, are well posted, thanks to the efforts of the local clubs and the Automobile Club of America.

The work of the coming months will unquestionably be directed toward posting the roads to the north of Boston, with the idea of giving the mountain tourists the best possible road directions.

The direct road from Boston to Portland is another much travelled highway, and one which has received considerable attention from the motorists throughout the district.

The State association has been particularly active in this matter. Besides having made arrangement for the erection of danger signs it has done a great deal of work toward securing the co-operation of towns and cities in the matter.

If the bill providing for the construction by private capital of a motor highway between Boston and some point in Rhode Island, the road being part and parcel of the motor highway from Boston to New York, meets with the same treatment at the hands of the committee on roads and bridges as have the majority of the measures proposed in favor of the motorists this season, then Massachusetts must be counted out of the game for another year at least.

There seems to be a strong opposition to the scheme, and, judging from what one hears at the State House, the petitioners will be given leave to withdraw. Still there is a lot of work to be accomplished in Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York. When the stretches in those States are completed the Massachusetts legislators cannot very well withhold their sanction to a furtherance of the scheme by the construction of such roads in this State.

* * *

During the recent Automobile Show Frank Ferdinand of the famous Blue Store placed an order for a three-ton Frayer-Miller motor truck with Manager Lewis of the local agency for that car. The truck is to be delivered by April 15, and will thereafter be used in the delivery of goods from the Blue Store.

TEAMS CUT OUT FAST PACE IN ROLLER RACE

THIRD DAY'S STANDING.

	M.	L.
Williams-White	74	2
Hamilton-Merritt	74	2
Holden-Shinkwin	74	2
Burrett-Gendron	74	1
Russell-Russell	73	3
Hamilton, Jr.-Boyle	73	2
Rollins-Croser	70	3

Such terrific speeding on the skating surface as seen in the third night's racing of the big six-day race at the Park Suare Rink was never witnessed in the Hub.

For nearly the whole hour the seven teams were on the floor it was a continual spurt and when the time limit was up a more tired lot of racers were never so glad it was over.

The three leading teams, who had a lap on the field, endeavored to break the tie and had it hot and heavy between themselves for the whole racing period.

From the crack of the pistol there was a sizzling pace set and a succession of jumps, which only the hardy ones could respond to.

Even the star Hamilton was taken with a stitch in the side towards the end of the hour, but was forced to keep on and help out his mate, Merritt.

White and Williams were ever ready with a burst of speed at all stages and kept the others worried. Some of the lower placed teams were forced in the background by the awful pace and lost a lap.

The trouble began at the outset, and the leaders covered over six miles in the first fifteen minutes of racing and before the hour was up had totaled nearly twenty-five, which is remarkable skating for a long distance event.

LEWIS OUTPOINTS CHAMBERS.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Willie Lewis of New York outpointed Eddie Chambers of Philadelphia in their six-round fight at the Sharkey A. C. Lewis was not in the best of fighting condition, but his superior cleverness and punching ability gave him a lead.

JAKE BOULTES ONLY PROMISING RECRUIT

Special to the Boston American.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., March 21.—Jake Boutes, the St. Louis pitcher, is the only one of the Boston National recruits that looks fast enough for major league company. At present this player appears to be a good one, and should complete for the Hub one of the fastest pitching staffs in the business. He has speed to burn, a good assortment of curves, and judging by the small opportunity offered, has plenty of control.

President Dovey now feels satisfied that Sandow Mertes would not be a proper man for Boston. He spiked Manager Tenney several years ago, and the Boston leader has not forgotten it, so there would not be absolute harmony if he joined the club. The management will not increase the salary offered Mertes one cent. The chances are that Sandow will accept the figure, but when he joins the team he will surely get a very chilly reception.

Pitcher Pat Flaherty hurt his right shoulder wrestling with Johnny Bates, and he won't be able to practice for some time. As Flaherty's pitching arm is his left, there is no need of worrying over the injury.

The mercury hovered around the 90 mark yesterday. It was certainly a dog's day, and Catcher Orndorff was bitten in the leg by a canine. Owing to the sultry weather, afternoon practice was cut out.

JOE THOMAS IS AFTER A BOUT WITH RYAN

That Joe Thomas is desirous of earning some coin with his fists is evidenced by the fact that yester, through his manager, Harry Foley, he posted a certified check for $1,000 for a match with either Tommy Ryan or Honey Mellody. Thomas prefers to meet Ryan, who now claims the middleweight championship, and to show his god faith, Thomas will let the $1,000 remain up as a side bet.

Ryan has claimed the title for many years, and within the last week has been issuing challenges to fight Tommy Burns. Burns has not paid any attention to the defi of Ryan, and Thomas is willing to give him a chance to show if he is now possessed of real championship calibre. The last appearance of Ryan was at Rochester, when he met Hugo Kelly in a six-round go which bore all the earmarks of a fake.

If Ryan passes up this offer there is a chance for Honey Mellody to defend his title of welterweight champion. In his two battles with Thomas, Mellody was the eleventh round. The last fight, at Philadelphia, was simply an exercise gallop for Thomas. He had Mellody in bad shape, while the Boston boy could not land any kind of a blow on Thomas. Mellody has made the claim that in both battles they met at catchweights, and the title was not at stake. Thomas claims that he can make the welterweight limit and repeat his victories over the champion. With these two offers it looks as if Thomas will soon get busy.

NEW TROTTER FOR "LOTTA"

LEXINGTON, March 21.—J. W. Smith, agent for Jack Crabtree, and manager of the famous trotting stable of Miss Lotta Crabtree, the former actress, made a flying trip to this city, and left for Boston after leasing the racing qualities of the six-year-old mare Brace Girdle. She is by Tregantle and out of Deborah, by Dictator, second dam the famous brood mare Lady Frank, the dam of Jay Bird, etc. The mare has been in training over the track here, in the stable of Ed Allen, and is said to have a world of speed. She is owned by Dr. T. B. Baton.

PERELLI BEATS BARNES.

WORCESTER, March 21.—John Perelli of New York won two falls from Jim Barnes of Springfield in 21 and 15 minutes, respectively. The men were unevenly matched. Perelli looked to weigh 190 and Barnes 160 pounds.

PROKOS DEFEATS PARKER.

LYNN, March 21.—One of the most closely contested wrestling bouts ever held in this city was pulled off when James Prokos succeeded in twice throwing Harvey Parker of Brockton. The first fall was gained in 25m. 10s., and the second in 12m. 40s. Both falls resulted from half nelson holds.

CATARRH and CONSUMPTION

Taylor Can't Come to Terms With Shortstop

FRED PARENT ON MARKET

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

A. H. C. Mitchell,

Baseball Expert for the Boston American.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 21.—The news that Little Rock trounced Boston at Pine Bluff yesterday is, I think, overshadowed by the news that Freddie Parent is on the market. He and President Taylor cannot agree on terms. Freddie refuses to budge from the amount he asks for his services and Mr. Taylor cannot get him to talk compromise.

A little transaction of two years ago in which the owner of the club feels that he was taken advantage of by the little shortstop, has served to further increase the tension between the player and the magnate. Mr. Taylor has had repeated conferences with Freddie and has found him as stubborn as a mule. The last talk took place this morning and, as they seemed to be getting further apart, it was finally proposed that Parent be placed on the market for a sale or a trade. If Wagner goes along as he has been going he will more than fill the place made vacant by the possible retirement of Parent, for there is still a chance that Freddie and John I. may get together.

This is strictly up to PaPrent, however, for Mr. Taylor feels that he has exhausted all the arguments he can bring to bear on the case and will go no further. If the shortstop wants to remain in Boston, and he has confessed that he would rather play there than anywhere else for the same money he must get down off his high horse and be sensible, like every other player on the team.

Wagner Makes Star Play.

There has hardly been a flaw in the play of Wagner since he took his place among the regulars. He looks better the further he goes. He is fielding grandly and is a splendid thrower, using motions a good deal like the old timer, Jack Glasscock who, in his day, was one of the very best in the business. Wagner's batting has been of the best. In yesterday's game at Pine Bluff he knocked out a double and a single, and made a sacrifice in four times up. Also he contributed the star play of the game, when he threw out a man at the plate after taking the ball ten feet to one side.

That game at Pine Bluff was enough to drive a man to drink. In the first place, the boys got up at 6:30 in the morning and then had to wait more than one hour for the train to start. It was a hot, dusty ride of two hours, but things went all right until the teams struck the grounds. There was a little grand stand the size of a band box twenty feet behind the home plate. There was a skin diamond, with white sand over the surface. The outfield looked as though it had been plowed and grass allowed to grow. Our outfielders made no attempt to run after flies that did not come directly at them, for to do so would have been taking great chances with high-priced ball players.

Uncle Cy pitched five innings and let Little Rock down with five hits. The score was tied at 3 to 3 when he retired and Kroh replaced him. What the Travelers did to the youngster was a caution. In the seventh they hammered out four hits for four runs and in the eighth they put in two more hits which, with a wild throw of a bunt, was good for two more tallies. The boys had to stand up all the way in the slow three-mile ride home from the grounds and when they finally reached Little Rock at 7:15 at night they were a pretty tired and disgusted lot of ball players.

Criger in Fine Condition and Full of Ginger.

In the absence of the regulars the other players took two long work-outs at Little Rock. The feature of the two sessions was the work of Lou Criger, who appeared with his team mates for the first time this season. The veteran was full of ginger and whipped them down to second in his old-time style. He said he felt better and was in better baseball condition than he has ever been at this season of the year. It was a treat to see the old fellow work and his presence inspired confidence to the rest of the boys. President Taylor was tickled to death as he watched Criger and this served to put him in good humor after his unsatisfactory talk with Parent.

This afternoon the Bostons will line up against Litle Rock for the last game of the series. Big Bill Dinneen will probably be asked to pitch a few innings, although he had a long work-out yesterday in the boiling sun. The thermometer here has ranged around 90 for the past few days, but the players revel in it and would not have it any cooler. They all hope to strike good weather when they move north on Friday.

HAL CHASE HOLDS OUT FOR $1,000 INCREASÉ

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 21.—Hal Chase, the famous first baseman, whose negotiations for more money if he is to appear in the uniform of the New York Americans this year have set New York fans to talking, blew into Los Angeles yesterday. He came quietly, but it was not long before he was discovered and forced to make the rounds of his old haunts and shake hands with his numerous local friends.

"Just $1,000 now stands in the way of my signing a new contract with the New York team. All this talk that I will give in at the last minute and sign up is nonsense.

"I have bought out a cigar store in San Jose and don't care much whether I play ball this year or not. I'll divide my time between taking care of the business and playing with the little San Jose team."

Chase is here to play with the St. Mary's College team of Oakland.

The last remaining members of the New York Giants left Los Angeles when Secretary Fred M. Knowles, his wife and child, departed at 9:40 over the Southern Pacific for San Antonio, where they will join McGraw and his band of players. Only one incident marred the getaway of the Giants. McGraw lost a valise somewhere between the hotel and depot. The grip belonged to Mrs. McGraw and contained silverware and other valuables to the extent of $200.

JOSHUA CRANE TO PLAY SANDS

Joshua Crane, of this city, and C. E. Sands of New York, will begin the final match for the national court tennis championship at the Tennis and Racquet Club this afternoon. The winner will meet Jay Gould, the present title holder, at the same club, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Smashing the Piano Trust

We Licked the Combination in 22 Cities Lately

Our agents swooped down upon 22 New England cities, armed with Uncle Sam's best ammunition—good old greenbacks—and bought every Trust piano that they could lay their hands on. The poor small Piano Trust Dealers and agents who have been tied up to the combination, and who have been laying back to sell in a high trust market, got frightened at the strength we have shown in our fight with the Trust, and surrendered to us at terms that would make you laugh. They could not sell to the public at Trust prices because we were underselling them. The Trust would not buy the pianos back, so the poor fellows threw Trust agreements, contracts and all to the winds and sold out to us at revenge prices. Just read the smashing we gave the Piano Trust in this last battle. We bought at battle prices 245 new Trust Pianos in the following cities:

PORTLAND, ME.	7 Pianos	FALL RIVER, MASS.	7 Pianos
BANGOR, ME.	8 Pianos	LAWRENCE, MASS.	10 Pianos
AUGUSTA, ME.	4 Pianos	WORCESTER, MASS.	22 Pianos
MANCHESTER, N. H.	8 Pianos	SPRINGFIELD, MASS.	18 Pianos
CONCORD, N. H.	6 Pianos	HAVERHILL, MASS.	16 Pianos
NASHUA, N. H.	7 Pianos	HARTFORD, CONN.	15 Pianos
ST. ALBANS, VT.	4 Pianos	NEW HAVEN, CONN.	22 Pianos
BURLINGTON, VT.	6 Pianos	NEW LONDON, CONN.	8 Pianos
MONTPELIER, VT.	3 Pianos	BRIDGEPORT, CONN.	7 Pianos
LOWELL, MASS.	11 Pianos	PROVIDENCE, R. I.	21 Pianos
LYNN, MASS.	16 Pianos	PAWTUCKET, R. I.	19 Pianos

Do you know what we are going to do? We are going to put The Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' sacrifice tag on every one of them and scatter them throughout N. E. at No Profit Prices. We will scatter them as seeds among the people that they may produce a knowledge of intelligent piano buying—every one we sell will prove to the public that the Trust has been charging from 200 to 400 per cent. more for their pianos than the moral law allows. Buy your piano from us; no matter what make you want we have it. Help us to fight the Trust and we will make it worth your while. Call if you can and call early.

Root and Taft—What About TWEED?

Dr. Butler and Others Mustn't Forget Root's Original Client When They Talk of Root for the White House

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, the head of Columbia College, is a very intelligent man, and a good man. It is sad that he should be deceived by Root, the cunning hired jackal of Tweed, and of any man able to hire him.

Dr. Butler has recently solemnly said, "Root in the White House and Taft on the Supreme Bench would be a perfect combination."

About the TAFT part of his statement we have nothing much to say. Taft is a good, nice man, and might be serviceable in any place where fat would do as well as brains. He has long proved a gentle buffer or air-cushion for a violent, excitable person. It would not be unreasonable to pay him a salary as one of the numerous judges that the various interests pick out.

But, if Mr. Root is to be put into the White House, WHY NOT MR. TWEED IN THE UNITED STATES TREASURY?

If by any miracle of public stupidity such a man as Root, the hired lawyer of public scoundrels, the man who actually got his dwelling house from the stolen profits of Tweed, could be thought of for the White House, then, BY SOME OTHER MIRACLE, Tweed should be brought from his grave, and put in charge of the treasury of the United States.

Surely, if Root would use what intellect he has defending Tweed, taking Tweed's money, KNOWING TWEED TO BE A THIEF, he would also, with the same working of his peculiar conscience, delight to take his client, Tweed, and turn the people's treasury over to him. If he did not give it to Tweed, he'd give it to some one worse.

We cannot accept Root in the White House without Tweed in the treasury. Anybody who would vote for Root in one place would also be willing to vote for Tweed in the other.

But we can tell Mr. Butler this:

A man with the cunning of Root may get and keep the money of a Tweed. He may get the money of the modern thieves, and do the dirty work for them all. He may be the cunning jackal and tout of every big public scoundrel in the country, BUT HE WILL NEVER GET INTO THE WHITE HOUSE AS PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

He may get in through the back door or the front door as the cunning adviser of the man in office. He may get the people's money when a President can give it to him of his own will.

BUT HE WILL NEVER GET A DOLLAR FROM THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES AS THEIR REPRESENTATIVE.

The people may not elect geniuses to public office. They may not get men entirely free from sinister influences, BUT THEY WON'T, IF THEY KNOW IT, SELECT AS THE HEAD OF THE UNITED STATES THE MAN SELECTED BY TWEED TO DEFEAT JUSTICE, AND THE MAN SELECTED BY ALL THE BIG PUBLIC SCOUNDRELS TO HELP THEM STEAL THEIR MONEY.

Mr. Root will have to die as he has lived—the paid lawyer of men of the Tweed type, and the occasional office holder put into office IN SPITE OF THE PEOPLE WHO DESPISE HIM.

Mr. Root as Secretary of State may, as he DOES, disgrace the United States and every man in it who never took the pay of a thief. BUT THAT MATTER IS BEYOND THE PEOPLE'S CONTROL. He wouldn't be in that office if the people could help it, and he knows it well in his own dark, well-greased conscience. The people cannot put him out of that office, for things are arranged in such a way as makes it possible to put the cunning lawyer of the thief in an honored position.

But the people can keep Root out of the first place in the country, AND THEY WILL DO IT. AND COULD DO IT IF HE HAD EVERY ROTTEN DOLLAR IN THE UNITED STATES BACK OF HIM.

The Real American

By Charles Fleischer

(RABBI TEMPLE ADATH ISRAEL)

ITALY has decided to celebrate annually the birthday of George Washington.

That act is gracious and fitting, for a name like Washington's belongs to the world. Besides, Italy having produced the man who discovered America, she rightly feels a responsibility for us and a pride in our achievement.

Longfellow, our most American of poets, has told us that all humanity "is hanging breathless on our fate." This high self-conceit, I feel, is not unbecoming to us. In a vital sense it is true that the destiny of mankind is, for the time, bound up in the career of America.

Therefore, I feel that it befits the American to be cosmic in his mental attitude. The typical American should be a nationalistic cosmopolitan, a partisan enthusiast for universal ideals.

There are two reasons for this. First, we are not a people of single stock, but an aggregation of varied human elements. When once we are a nation, we shall be the most hybrid and composite people ever developed. Therefore our nationalism is naturally of cosmopolitan character.

And then, in consecrating ourselves to democracy, we have dedicated ourselves not to a peculiarly and distinctively American doctrine, but to an elemental and universal social principle.

Simply, America is privileged, on a large scale, to be the exponent of and the experimenter with an ideal of human relations which concerns all men.

The Anglo-Saxon deludes himself who imagines that America is or is to become Anglo-Saxon. Again, he deceives himself if he thinks that the typical American is the Anglo-Saxon American.

Also he gives himself needless worry if he fears that America will not be able to "assimilate the foreigner."

I answer, that AMERICA will be able to assimilate the foreigner, but the ANGLO-SAXON will not.

The greater part of the agitation for the restriction of immigration is the expression of the Anglo-Saxon's instinct of self-preservation. Unconsciously he fears that he will be swamped by the flood of "foreigners."

It is a useless fear. Physically he is sure of being overwhelmed, and spiritually he is equally sure of survival. Mere numbers of other elements must subordinate the Anglo-Saxon type of American. But the spirit of the Anglo-Saxon, as expressed in Aemrican institutions, will never die in this land.

It is a question whether or when the mixture of many human elements in our country will produce a new type of physical man, to be called THE AMERICAN. If it does, I think we shall have the strongest, hardiest, handsomest human beings which the world has ever seen.

But I do not question the belief that America will witness the blending of the souls of half the peoples of the earth, so that psychically we shall become one nation, neither Anglo-Saxon, nor Celtic, nor Teutonic, nor Gallic, nor Latin, nor Slavic, nor Catholic, nor Protestant, nor Christian, nor Jewish—but simply HUMAN.

THE AMERICAN will be human—broadly, deeply, intensely, cosmically human.

The typical American will be the most human human being ever evolved, the kind whom the Roman poet's maxim will describe: "I consider nothing human foreign to me."

The typical American's spirit will breathe forth also the sentiment of our most modern of great poets, Rudyard Kipling:

Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet
'Till earth and sky stand presently at God's great judgment seat;
But there is neither East nor West, border, nor breed, nor birth,
When two strong men stand face to face, tho' they come from the ends of the earth.

Ne Tempora Mutantur?

By William J. Nagle

WHEN Egypt stretched her sceptre o'er man's bowed and humbled head
And loosed o'er slaves the lash that bit the bone—the game was red!
The golden game of empire piled the pyramids of shame
To bear eternal witness that the race was blind and lame.

II.

WHEN Greece forgot her greatness and the watchword Freedom gave
To walk in changing colors o'er the isles from wave to wave,
When galleys creaked with slaves to feed the pride they held in chase
The Beacon of the world became the bale-fire of the race.

III.

WHEN sanguine Rome rose red and nodded horror o'er the world,
And stalked the iron fields where his black banners were unfurled,

IV.

"O TEMPORA MUTANTUR!" cries the scholar overwise,
Which properly translated means—they change but their disguise.
And even o'er angry desert lands no flower could ever tame
O tempora mutantur! we rejoice we are not slaves,
While all these ancient serfs are laughing at us—in their graves!
Raise high his tax and standards—he, too, registered his shame.

Handbook for the Hurried

By Wex Jones

This is the age of handbooks.—Weekly paper.

THIS is no book for "mollycoddles."

The man who is any good as a citizen will camp out for at least four months every year, and this book will tell him how to do it.

In preparing for a trip to the Canadian wilds do not make the mistake of carrying too much baggage.

A light khaki suit, a pair of oxford shoes, two pairs of open-work socks, a pipe and a couple of pounds of tobacco, and a good book, say the "Winning of the West," will be enough.

For grub take a can of roast beef, which is "purer than the thoughts of childhood" since the inspection bill was passed. Bark and leaves can be found in almost every forest and make excellent salads.

A tent is not necessary, but some tenderfeet like to have a covering at night. An extra handkerchief will serve the purpose, a hatpin as ridgepole.

Once in the wilderness, the hunter must keep on the qui vive for game. Grizzlies are dangerous antagonists for inexperienced citizens, but with a little care they may be overcome.

Wear light boxing gloves when in pursuit of this game and avoid clinches, as the grizzly has an unfair habit of wrestling and hugging to avoid punishment.

Hit your opponent on the head until he is dazed and then carry him back to camp.

Bobcats are also bad things to get into a mix with. Rely upon quick footwork to avoid their jumps, and try to catch them off their guard.

Every morning before breakfast, which is to be eaten at 3:15, practice a sprint of five miles. This is necessary if you are to run down the large Canadian wolf. Soak your hands in alum, as the wolf has sharp teeth and you may be scratched when catching him.

Squirrels make good eating. The proper way to capture them is by climbing a tree after the nimble little fellows and chasing them from branch to branch.

When you've chased them to the last branch, you've got them, unless they jump. In this case, run down the tree so quickly that you'll be waiting to catch them before they hit the ground.

Should you be attacked by Indians, give the Carlisle College yell.

The mollycoddle is very likely to be lost in the woods while he is hardening himself to be a useful citizen. In such a case, ask a policeman which car you should take for your camp.

There is nothing more exciting than calling moose. The daring hunter waits behind a tree until the bloodthirsty creature approaches within easy range and then fills it full of lead from a magazine rifle. The principal requisite for this sport is a good memory, as there are 2,000,023 moose in Canada, and none of them will come unless called by its own name.

E. Z. MARK! OH, E. Z. MARK!

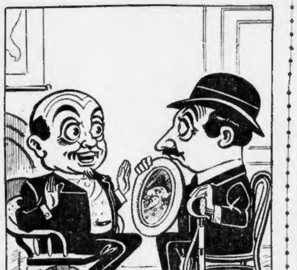
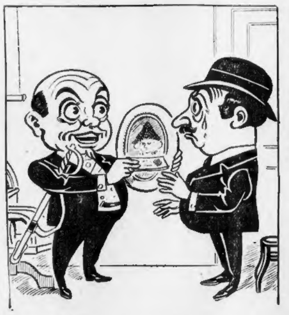
1. STRANGER—Mr. Mark, I am a distant relative of Mrs. Mark. I have learned that Mrs. Mark is desirous of becoming a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She, however, has no proof that one of her ancestors was an officer in the Continental Army. I, sir, have here that proof.

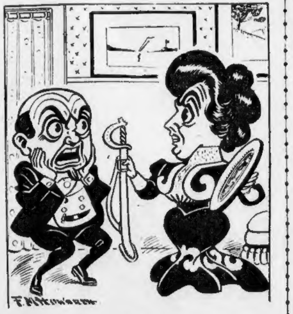


2. STRANGER—This, sir, is the portrait of our great-grandfather on her mother's side—Colonel Timothy Brown. These glorious relics have been in our family for over one hundred years, and are thoroughly authenticated.



3. STRANGER—But misfortune and poverty have overtaken me, and I offer you these precious relics of Mrs. Mark's heroic ancestors for the low price of two hundred dollars.

MR. E. Z.—By jove! I'll take them. Here are your two hundred. Mrs. Mark will be wild with delight.



4. MRS. MARK—What! MY ancestor? His sword? Colonel Timothy Brown—on my mother's side? Fought in the American Revolution? E. Z., you addle-pated idiot! This is nothing but a common cavalry sabre and this a chromo portrait of General Anthony Wayne. And, besides my folks all came from Germany not eighty years ago. BAH! BAH!

She Tells About an Experience That Would Seem to Indicate Clairvoyance or Suggestion

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

HERE is a metaphysical study for the various sects of my progressive-minded friends in America.

I have travelled much in America, in Cuba, in Jamaica, in Europe. I have lived for shorter or longer periods of time in hundreds of hotels. Never in all these experiences have I ever been a victim of a thief until now.

Did Not Fear Thieves

IT never suggested itself to my mind that robbers or thieves had me in view. I leave hotel doors unlocked and trunks and bags unguarded, to the distraction of my friends. Scores of my acquaintances have expostulated with me on this matter.

They have convinced me over and over again that I was throwing temptation in the way of domestics and risking my own possessions by this lack of care. I would promise myself to do better, but forgot it, and sally forth with unlocked doors and trunks the next hour, and nothing happened to make me see the folly of my conduct.

When I came over to Europe for a somewhat protracted stay I was urged by these friends to use more precaution in these matters.

A Mania of Self-Protection

I FORGOT it on shipboard and in Rotterdam and in The Hague. But suddenly, on arriving at Hotel Amstel, Amsterdam, Holland, I was seized with a mania of self-protection against robbers. I locked my doors if I stepped outside; I locked my trunks; I went back after starting out, to be sure I had locked the trunk and the door.

"The Man," accustomed to my wide-open-door methods and lack of precaution, stared in amazement at my new departure. He asked me what had happened, and I said I was only determined that nothing should. I assured him I had become sensible at last. (He smiled, but looked incredulous.)

Yet, for the first time in my life, I was the victim of a hotel thief. With the door locked and the key in my pocket, my pretty new travelling gown was stolen from my clothes press closet in Hotel Amstel. Other garments of more value were left, the gown taken. The most needed and most comfortable of all was mysteriously removed from the room, and detectives and the assistance of the hotel management and the American Consul all failed to find a trace of it or of the thief.

Now the question presents itself to me. Did my continued thought of precaution against robbers suggest theft and cause the act? Or was it a case of clairvoyance on my own part—of foreseeing the proximity of a thief in the hotel?

Did my own sub-conscious mind go out and meet the thought of the thief, bent on robbery, and so cause me to lock my doors and trunks without knowing why I did it? Or did the insistence of all my sensible-minded friends produce in me a state of fear of robbery which brought the result by suggestion?

Or did some disembodied friend try to put me on my guard by making me aware that I was in the neighborhood of a thief? If so, why did not this spirit-friend suggest locking the wardrobe door as well, or impel me to intercept the robber?

A Metaphysical Problem

CERTAINLY the incident is more than a mere occurrence, for, never having thought of robbery before, and never having met with a loss, it is most peculiar that this experience should have followed directly upon my sudden resolve to guard myself against thieves. This metaphysical phase of the subject has occupied my mind to some purpose, since it has served to distract me from the aggravating consciousness of my loss and the inconvenience which resulted.

But all the mental processes I bring to bear on it fail to materialize the garment or discover the thief.

Whoever she was, I am sorry for her. Her hour will come.

Some Lines on Spring

By James J. Montague

WHEN the solemn night-tide found us with the covers tucked around us,
Ungrammatic'ly, but blithely, we were breathing: "Spring has came!"
For the breeze blew mild and mellow, and the moon shone warm and yellow,
And the stars beamed forth benignantly in tiny dots of flame.
"Ha!" we mused. "Us for the barrel where we keep our Spring apparel, Winter didn't last forever, though we thought it might, at that."
Then, somehow, the deal was shifted, and what time we slept there drifted
Neatly moulded snow heaps under every window in our flat.

SPRING! Outside the wind was whizzing, blizzards buisily were blizzing,
Frost was on the foolish crocus and the streets were chock-a-block.
SPRING! Through frenzied financiering pallid panic went careering,
For the rude relapse of Winter froze the water in the stock.
Once a foolish poet person wrote some chic and charming verse on
Welcoming the lovely Springtime when you feel that it is nigh;
But if you are in possession of the commonest discretion,
Keep your welcome done in moth balls till the first of next July.
